This manual is for the first pattern of mod 10 match pistol the one without a barrel weight fixed under the muzzle. I have just resealed mine and thought it would be a good idea to write up things that you need to be careful of and how to do it right and not damage yourself or the pistol. The gun was wrapped with a leather welding gauntlet to protect it from the vice jaws but it kept moving. So I used new fibre vice guards on their own, these gripped and did not marks the pistol, these will now go away and only be used for this type of work. I used a leather strap wrench, small chain wrench with leather to protect but to no avail. I used water pump pliers VERY big ones and I mean big, they will open up to 200mm and are big enough to grip the gas suspension balls on Citroen cars. They are not stilsons. The caps will probably come away leaving the cogs behind. Fish them out and they should go back in the same side the same was round as they will have worn to match the rack they run on. Use a dowel rod with a slot cut in it and fit squares of cloth in it to reach right inside the chamber. Dry using new pieces of cloth.

Go and degunk the springs, pistons, caps and cogs while the chamber dries a bit. The new washers are quite hard material and you could mangle them putting them on. I made a mandrel from some nylon rod turned in the lathe to 12.5 mm then a taper of 7 degrees to allow the seals to slide up and stretch slowly then pushed over the button while the piston is gently held in the vice. The nylon was lubricated with a smidgeon of silicone oil. As one write up says it can take 2mins or two hours took me about 5 mins. Put a cloth under the gun as you WILL drop the screws and you WILL not see them again. Glue the cap screws to the driver with a blob of grease if it helps and remember FINE threads cross easily. Drive them in with the driver with your fingertips till they stop. If they are too proud the hole alignment is not perfect so keep gentle pressure on the screw and turn the cap slowly back and forward feeling the screw slowly in. For the cylinder cap I found a piece of solid wire the same dia. Did it make any difference. Well the gun shot pellets and they hit the target and sometimes the holes were near each other sometimes they were somewhere random, to me it seemed to have enough power. With the new seals after about 10 shots they started to close up and after 50 shots I would say this gun is very accurate and seems very crisp. These date from the postWar Millard Brothers era. With many thanks to David Troubledshooter for permission to use his scans. These appear to date from the UK in the 1950s or 1960s which would place them in the postWar Millard Brothers era. With many thanks to Joe for these scans. Thanks to Micke for these detailed instructions. English version to follow soon. Thanks to Micke for these excellent instructions. With thanks to Des for these pics. Note that the trigger adjustment diagram on page 4 is actually of a woodstock model 6!

Interesting to note that the literature attached to Diana mod 6s sold in Germany had the same cover artwork, but with Diana in place of Air pistol. Of course, in the years after WW2 Milbro owned the Diana trademark in the UK, hence the use of the Original mark above. First posted by Oliver Gilkes Well, I came into possession of a series of information manuals for various Milbro rifles recently and so I thought that I would post here links to some scans in case they are of interest or use. Feel free to download these from the VAG site if you wish, or use them as you like, public access should be set. They are in essence merely parts lists, with a few basic instructions, though the later rifles, the Bobcat and G80 have longer and more informative writeups. So, a blast from the UK industrial past. It is an underlever, with seemingly a sliding breech mechanism. The only other underlever Milbro produced was the Model 55 the Diana 50 look alike. This one is later, it has the safety catch that dates it to the early 1960s, however, it never seems to have been produced, unless someone knows differently. There is a ref to it in John Walters Airgun Book, and there is this parts drawing I have been kindly provided with. Was it meant to be a replacement for the model 55. With many thanks to Frank for these scans. Reply Quote Please Login or Register to reply to this topic. All forum topics Previous Topic Next Topic Currently viewing this topic 1 guest.
