I even had my sister who is professionally trained to install carseats try it and she told us there had to be something wrong with the design and to return it. We tried using the latch hooks in my husbands car and they didnt even reach. Then we tried clipping them together in back of the seat like the manual says and they wouldnt even reach each other to hook together. I suppose its possible that it was just a lemon, but I am a details person and read the instructions 3x and still couldnt make it work properly. All in all, avoid this seat if you have a small backseat to work with. 0 out of 5 stars Wonderful I just had an accedent and my 10 month old was in this car seat. It worked so well that my son isnt hurt or injured. After I got him out he was fine, laughing, walking around, talking to everyone. He wasnt fased a bit. This car seat did its job. I love this seat so much that I am now going to buy it again car seats are only good for one accedent. See more July 7, 2009 14 5 Average Rating 5.0 out of 5 stars Great, safe and comfy seat After reading all of the reviews, I feel that it should be made clear that the seat is SUPPOSED to slide in a pivotlike manner. The woman who claimed her sister installs carseats professionally and advised her of a design flaw is way off. There is supposed to be a degree of give from the pivot point when the carseat is latched down. This feature allows the seat to move and absorb the impact in the event of an accident. However, the carseat should NOT move more than an inch from side to side and front to back. Everyone should have their seats installed at a fire station to become educated on the proper installation and use of your seat. It is completely free, and firefighters are certified in these procedures. The Alpha Omega Elite is an excellent, safe seat. I do not see having to take off the cover corner when installing as being any issue of significance. I do not have tiny hands, and I still found it to be quite easy to do. There is sufficient padding for your little one. Again, make sure that you have this seat installed at the fire station the first time you put it in, so they can advise you on how to use the features. If your son or daughters head is flopping down, then you do not have your seat at a proper angle. This issue is not the fault of the carseat you MUST roll a towel or use cutup pool noodles on ANY car seat to achieve a proper incline.

I will say that the Alpha Omega Elite is not the easiest to install compared to other brands our Recaro Signo is an absolute sinch, but this carseat is phenomenal when it comes to comfort and safety. It is sturdy, well built, and an excellent choice for protecting your little one. See more MommyND, July 13, 2009 13 0 Average Rating 5.0 out of 5 stars Awesome product I bought this product several years ago. I liked it because it could be used from newborn to 100 lbs. But, when the Washington State Dept of Transportation came to a class I was in to talk about car seats, and mentioned that this is the BEST car seat on the market, I was sold. Though I did use the infant seat that came with our stroller until our daughter grew out of it at 4 months. Shes a very tall child. Unfortunately we also had to buy her a booster because of the angle of the seat bothered her legs, when put into our vehicle with angled seats not a car seat defect, just the angle of our seats with the angle of the car seat was awkward for her. NOW it is time for my grandchild yes I have a child in a booster, and a grandchild on the way. I have already told my son not to buy a car seat, because I want to make sure he gets this one. Im glad that it is much cheaper now than it was 6 years ago. See more DopeyFan, June 16, 2009 11 1 Average Rating 5.0 out of 5 stars Excellent product I have had this car seat now for about a year. My son always was complaining of his back hurting, so I got him this one, it has lots of padding in the back, the straps adjust very easily. Its a little larger than I expecting, but its a very nice carseats. Its a heavy carseat as well. I would recommed this!!!!!!!!!!!!

See more jmgreenfield23, February 22, 2010 1 0 Average Rating 3.0 out of 5 stars You get what you pay for. I bought this car seat a few weeks back because it was the cheapest carseat that held 5100 pounds.I figured it would save buying any more car seats being convertible. Unfortunately, just to get the car seat strapped in you have to pull the seat pad off. I had the hardest time getting the pad hooked back to the car seat. It took me about 15 minutes and I have tiny fingers. And it took my husband and myself to adjust the seat straps. Since we have a second car seat for travel and this one stays stationary in our Jeep, Im keeping it, but if you plan on moving it in and out of cars on a regular basis, I wouldnt suggest this car seat. I did like it for the fact the harness never needed to be taken out to be adjusted. It sat fairly high so she could see out the windows better. But it is by far the last seat she needed. She outgrew the harness in height before hitting 40 lbs she was 34 lbs. I then moved my next child into it. While she was using it there was a problem with the harness adjuster, it BROKE. So there I was with no safe seat for my little one. I considered getting another one because of the long expiration life but with how short of a time we could use it even if we used it for my new baby it wasnt worth the cost. It is good for extended rear facing though. My daughter was 2.5 and still able to rear face. While considering the new purchase I placed my newborn in one and there was no way to get the seat adjusted safely for him. They did come out with a new seat with higher harness height and weight limits so that may be a better choice if you like this seat. I would not buy this carseat again. If you plan to put it in your vehicle and never get it out, then go fot it, but getting it buckled into the car is extremely difficult. It took me forever and I have to alternate between 2 vehicles. Im thinking about trying to return it. This car seat does come equipped with the Latch. You can use this either rear facing or forward facing. You will not use the latch when using the seat as a belt postioning booster. When using this forward facing you do also have to use the tether that also comes with the car seat. However thats no guarantee that you can get a tight, good install using LATCH with this car seat in your vehicle by Rainbrella 0 0 3. It will work with the LATCH system for forward facing, but not rearfacing. For rearfacing you have to use the vehicles seatbelt along with the metal buckle that comes with most carseats to hold the seatbelt secure.

These seats are used on the air lines all the time. You would have to check with the air lines about the fit. However, I cannot recommend removing the arm rests from the car seat. This could compromise the safety of the seat and would void the warranty. This car seat does work well for infants starting at 5 pounds and 19 inches. Young babies sleep a lot and youll find it is 100 times easier to take a sleeping baby out of the car if you dont have to take him out of the car seat. This Clek Foonf Review details all the benefits offered by this highend convertible car seat. Recommended!We used the recline position on the van seats to make a perfect fit. I think the adjustable mechanism is wonderful and so easy to adjust to our kids growth. I like the quick release harness and the removeable head pad.

The color selection is great and the quality of the material is awesome. I feel we have made a good choice in this particular seat. Weve had the seat for well over a year and it is holding up very well. Overall the hassles didnt outweigh the quality of the car seat. I figure with the type of seats we have in the van wed have to make adjustments regardless of the brand and make of any car seat.It is smaller than I expected, which is nice for compact cars.When asleep his head falls so far forward even when the seat is the most reclined position. I dont understand how to use the pool noodle and wonder Is that covered in an accident by insuranceNo more cry. reclined position, they look far too upright. They used to love sleeping in the car, but these seats do not allow them to sleep comfortably. Their heads are always hanging forward. Might be better for older kids, but not 20 lb. 6 month olds. I will be using these as spare seats and purchasing something else. Also the straps easily tangle and it is so frustrating to untangle them! Straps easily tangle. There are no real good cushions supporting the side if the child's head for when he falls asleep on the road, so his head hangs forward on his chest. The crotch buckle is too tight and pushes against him. The seat is INCREDIBLY complicated to take in and out of the car. The seat is not very stable once in the car and the 3rd reclining position still makes him sit almost completely upright. Returning it light and easy to install. I love that it reclines to make long trips comfortable my daughter. This is a soft, comfortable seat that gives maximum protection. Excellent value for the money. My daughter seems comfy and safe in her new car seat! I got this item at such an affordable price I couldn't believe it.

Anything I need for my kids I will definitely order from this site. The quality of the seat is very good which can be seen with the sturdy construction and heavier fabric, both of which tend to be degraded in other comparable seats at this price point. It's easy to install in your vehicle, the baby is safe, lots of features. For that quick, early morning drive, this car seat does the job. However, if you're looking for this car seat to be your all-purpose, daily car seat, I wouldn't recommend it. We ended up having to use it for a weekend while my car and the primary car seat were at the shop. It wasn't a good option for full-day use the seat bucket is deep and the back side offers little support; so when our little one was ready for his naps, he could not lean his head back. Instead, his head would flop forward and he was bobbing his head back and forth the whole time. This also meant light sleeping which equals a cranky baby. So if you're looking for an inexpensive quickfix for a simple daily or emergency drive, go for it. If you're looking for your main, daily car seat then I recommend going for higher quality I love the Britax Boulevard. That's what's in my car and I LOVE it!!! It's hard to pull out and it's hard to tighten up on the infant. So far I haven't found a cure for this and the factory isn't much help either. Comfortable. Space saver in car. Best part was the price I got from Albee Baby. You have to use a screwdriver and lots of patience 1 hour. Everyone needs to clean the cover and this seat makes it impossible. Friends who also have this seat said they use a damp cloth because it is too hard to take totally off and throw in washer like other car seats! You have to in thread straps back thru the bottom clips, after you have pried them off with a screwdriver, locking clips, middle clip and head rest!! Way too complicated!! Our son had outgrown his infant carrier but still needed to be rear facing.

After reading some reviews on the size of this seat I was skeptical about it fitting in my vehicle. I have a Trailblazer and even with it reclined the whole way back it fits perfectly in the middle of the seat. If it were to be placed behind driver or passenger seat it would not be able to recline the whole way or the seats would have to be slid far up. This seat will definitely take my son through his car seat and booster seat years. I love that you don't have to rethread the straps to. He seems comfy in it and seems to like it better than the infant carrier. I guess it was good enough for the price, but had obviously been used and repackaged. The cupholders were scratched on the inside, the seat was not in plastic, and the padded part of the seat was matted and looked dirty. I placed my son in the chair and noticed when he falls asleep his head slumps to the front and to the side. He had no head or neck support while sleep. As of right now my son is rear facing although it won't be for long due to his length but I don't recommend this car seat for rear facing infant. It may be ok for forward facing children but then again, their heads will probably slump to the side and forward also. Color Does not recline very far back He is now a toddler and it still works well. Can also see where it easily transitions into a booster seat as he grows. Cup holder is easy for the 14 month old to use. It is a nice seat but sometimes it's hard to tighten the harness. The ones I ordered for my son this time are very easy to operate and have a different kind of latch. EXCELLENT improvements!!! Great buy! Reclines. Cup holder Great car seat, my sister bought the same one first my nephew and he Love it. I had no issues with installation or set up. These seats will last for years since they accommodate growth cycles. I do not regret the purchase. The Paternal Grandparents also purchased a set and are happy.

I do think it would be a tight squeeze for a compact car but most better quality carseats would be as well. If you put them to the rear and they are over one, its going to be a tight fit. Forward facing it is perfect. Good construction, quality material. Cup hold is a little unsturdy but i really dont use that one anyways. Great car seat for the money. This is our second one! He always cried in the car in his infant carrier but now in this one he just falls asleep, its great. Also I love how the arm rests go up and down, it makes getting him in and out so easy! We are so excited that it will last my daughter until she is ready to move out of a booster and into a regular seat. She loves being out of the infant carrier. The carseat is as much of a headache to install as any carseat is using the latch system. I dont know of a seat that isnt a pain to install. The carseat has instructions are easy to follow. Overall, Im very pleased with this seat! We have only used them forward facing. The seats have held up well and the material doesnt show any signs of the wear and tear that my very active 2.5 year old puts on the seat. We liked that it came with a cup holder although the cup holder doesnt really securely attach and has long since been tossed aside by us. My son also enjoys having arm rests. The only thing that I dont love about the seat is that it can be a bit quirky to install. It probably took us about 20 minutes to get it right the first time. We have a Jeep Grand Cherokee and installing the seat in the middle of the backseat was a bit of a challenge. We also have a Chevy Traverse and I found that it actually installed more easily in the bucket seat. Well made seat. Arm rests. Cup holder. Price All Rights Reserved. It starts as a rearfacing infant car seat, converts to a forwardfacing car seat and later transitions into a beltpositioning booster. Its seat pad is easily removable for quick cleaning.
