Once again, I may be lured to the side of the Droid ("This is the way"), notably because of the S8 Ultra (which led me to look at the S22 ultra...and here I am...)To give you a bit of background, I have had most iPhones since the 1st one, also had a lot of Macs, iPads...but gradually, over the years, I have become less and less "attached" to apple products. Indeed I have tried a few Android phones (starting with a Galaxy S2, a OnePlus...) and tablets (I had a S5e, the Huawei mediapad...) and I have been using windows laptops as well. But for phones, I have usually struggled to keep Android phones for more than 6 months as I always grew dissatisfied at some point.So, I Have tried to sum up the pros of each system as I see it:IOS advantagesShortcuts automation: I find it is much easier and better integrated than TaskerSwipe gestures: although things have improved quite significantly with the latest android versions, I still feel that iOS has an edge. Also, I love "swipe-to-delete) and this is one of the thing miss the most on Android (on Instapaper or Evernote for instance...)Apple notes syncIntegration to Apple ecosystem (messages, Notes)More optimized software/hardwareA wider array of apps and even those that are on both platforms tend to be (slightly) better executed in iOS (twitter, evernote)Due app: this is silly, but I love this little app. I have never found a quicker way to add a reminder at a specific time.Pdf editor: I read and highlight/write on a lot of technical pdfs for work, and between pdf expert, highlights...there are great such apps on iOS, and I haven't found the equivalent on Android; not though that I have recently discovered Nebo for writing and converting to text and it looks awesome and is present on Android as well. This is a bit different than pdf editing though...Apple watch integration: I tried last years' Galaxy Watch and many Apple watch, and I still find that the Apple Watch is much better than the galaxy watches and better integrated with the iPhone. There is also the Sleep app, which is a wonderful sleep tracker.Apple fitness: I got a free subscription and like it quite a lotlive photos: I tend to prefer them to motion photos, but I tend to use them a bit less than in the pastApple pay : samsung pay is not working with my bank, and I have grown fond of paying for everything with my phone and/or watch.Photos : portrait mode (well it is more device-specific but up to now I always preferred the portrait mode of the iPhones I have used)Android advantages (w/ a focus on Galaxy phones given these are the only ones I have used over the past years)Notificationsactionable widgets and more customizable. I also learned that widget stacks were coming to OneUIIn general, more customization but this is something that I tend to do now that I am olderMy keyboard of choice, Gboard, works better on AndroidClipboard management is better on AndroidOnesync app : I tend to sync a lot of pdfs and videos on all my devices through onedrive. On ios, I have tried Documents and Filebrowser pro, but onesync is just more streamlined and efficient and works in the background.Genuine Files system (downloads...)Integration with Windows (galaxy phones/tablets): as I have a surface, the integration between Windows and Android is clearly interesting and provides an iOS/macOS like experience (having your messages on your laptop...)photos: zoom (S22 ultra)Adding storage w/ micro SD (not for S22 ultra though)USB-C: again, devices-specific, but I am fed up with having a lightning cable...So, what do you think? Any comments, experiences? Do you think some of my pros/cons are not valid ? When I look at all this, clearly what I would miss the most is the "swipe to delete", having some subpar apps, the tight integration between devices (although integration between samsuNG devices and between them and windows devices is getting better), Apple pay and the Apple watch. I know I am posting this in an Android forum and that people will probably be biased but I have the impression that Android users are, on average, more open to the other side and fairer in their views...I guess I will discover soon whether my hunch was correct ;-):thanks H,I was always reading a lot of comments all over the internet about iOS vs Android... Samsung vs iPhone etc...I was using Android since I remember and now I own an iPhone for a few days and I want to share my opinion about devices and software..As far as I remember I was always using Android phones. Oppo Reno 4, Samsung S10+, Samsung SE... Nexus, HTC etc...I always liked how Android was evolving. I also liked all my Samsung phones. Every single one was really high quality. Each device was top notch and felt high quality.Unfortunately, I was in a hurry and I had to buy myself a new phone. First I wanted to wait for S22 Ultra but eventually, I didn't have time and could wait much longer so I've decided to go for an iPhone.Size:Because I wanted to buy S22 Ultra I was sure I will take iPhone 13 Max Pro, but when I saw iPhone Pro Max for the first time I was like "wt?" this is so huge. Surprisingly when I compared my previous device Oppo Reno4 to iPPM it was almost this same size. iP was just a bit wider but it was almost twice the weight. In my hand, it felt just HUGE! Funny because I always liked big phones with big screens.When I took iPhone Max, it felt just right. Not to mention weight, because it was also heavy, felt really nice when I was holding him in my hand.I was trying to convince myself that I want a bigger phone... but with no luck. iP Pro Max was just too big for me. iP Pro was just the perfect size. Funny because it has just 6.1" but still feels big enough as every day device.tldr I decided to buy iPhone 13 Pro 256 Gb.Now... after a few days what do I think about software and device itself.Quality:iP compared to Samsung is IMHO same quality. Everything feels right. No problems with case or any parts.So if you are looking for a quality device both iPhone and Samsung are great.I just don't like one thing... when you tap a screen of an iPhone it feels a bit strange. Like tapping an "empty box". It feels strange... WHen I tap Samsung / Oppo screen it feels a bit better and more solid. Probably it's just because of used materials since Android uses Gorilla Glass.Camera:I do not care about camera at all. I can't compare anything. For me it's just camera that I use from time to time.Software:OS.It feels premium. Well designed and organized. Even for a long term Android user, everything is simple and easy to find.Notifications.A lot of people are complaining about notifications in iOS. To be honest I do not see any problems with that. The only thing I do not like is how they appear on the screen when the phone is unlocked. Apart from that, I think they are 'fine'.Widgets.Even though you have less freedom with widgets when compared to Android I think they are quite nice. Well designed and they are OK. Especially I do like calendar Agenda and weather. IMHO all Google widgets look better on iOS than in Android.The only thing I miss is the persistent Google Search bar.Icons:It's a shame you can only have 4 icons in the dock. I would prefer to have 5 or 6 of them. It's not a big problem but with Nova everything was possible :-).Also, I do not like that you cannot randomly re-arrange icons on the screen. You cant have two icons at the top and two at the bottom. They are all aligned from the top to the very end of the home screen. This IMHO sucks a bit, but I can live with that creating new/separate home screens.Apps.They feel a bit better integrated with iOS. Almost every single app from Android has it's equivalent in iOS.Gallery.IMHO in Android, there was more freedom. You can't just copy/paste a file to an iPhone and use a folder as a gallery. Also, it's not easy to arrange all of the files.Battery.I was reading a lot of comments about iP Pro Max battery life, but I must say that battery in Max is also very good. Was heavily using my phone for the whole day and wasn't able to kill my phone. I'm really surprised by the battery life.I miss:Double tab screen to run some command/app etc. I'm using a double back tab but it's not this same.I would like to make icons on the screen smaller, but in iOS it's impossible.WhatsApp migration. I didn't even know it impossible to restore WhatsApp backup from Drive. OMG!It's impossible just to copy/paste files from your computer to your device. It was very easy with an Android phone.USB-C ...Freedom on the desktop with icons and widgets arrangementWhat I do not miss:AOD - never used it. I'm checking notifications when I want not when they want me to check them.Widgets - in iOS they are as good as on Android----After all I do know now why people loves iPhones. Their quality is amazing and iOS is well designed and organized. Everythig feels premium. Unfortunately price is also premium.Too bad there is no 6.4" or 6.5" option because that size would be the best IMHO. 6.7 is unfortunately too big, but 6.1" feels almost as good as my previous 6.4" screen.At the moment I do not regret anything and I feel like I've made a good decision. I also do not think I will come back to Android. At least not at the moment.Edit:I'm very surprised with speakers quality. They sounds almost like a little external speaker. WOW! This may not be huge deal to many people but for me they are essentials.Type C port : I have so many types wires at home, apple still uses the clunky lightning port.YouTube Vanced - enough saidCall recording and notification log (this app will save logs for example on whatsapp even if the message is deleted)Always On Display.ADB & setting default appsCustomization : Third party launchers/ keyboards/icon packsNotification management and multi window: it is better organized and handled on androidAd block system wide : by going to Private DNS typing : dns.adguard.comFile management : On android its way superior than IOS.Sideloadng apps/ updates : The ability to sideload apps, usually open source stuff not on play store, but I haven't done that in a while and if you can also sideload the new update from the google's site.Some features which i didn't include in my top 10 featuresVibrate call on call connect (nice buzz when you call someone and when they receive the call you get a little buzz)Price: Not everyone has money to get a iPhones. Androids provide a range of options fitting everyone's budget. A decent Xiaomi can get the work done as well.Double tap to sleep from home/lockscreen.Custom Rom and Tasker : currently running pixel dust rom.
