Poner formal command form

Informal commands or tú/ usted(es)-commands are directed to a mineral several people with whom you are familiar. You use formal commands with friends who have the same social position or age that you like who you like to be near, etc. For formal commands we use different tree verb forms: the third singular person of this indicative when you tell a person to do something, the second singular person of this subjunctive when you are telling a person not to do something, the third plural person of this subjunctive when you are telling different people to do or not do something. If you are not sure, you can also use the verb conjugation . - ar verbs: hablar -er verbs: comer -ir verbs: escribir one person: Fallo. Habla despacio. Come on. Write the paper. (Write the letter.) several people: Do Hablen dispatch. (Speak slowly.) Coman sopa. Escriban the card. A person: Don't. No desperate. Don't talk slowly. (Don't eat soup.) No escribas the card. (Do not write the letter) several people: Don't. No desperate. Don't talk slowly. (Don't eat soup.) No escriban the card. (Do not write the letter) There are several exceptions for informal commands directed to a person, where you can not only use the third person present, but a special form. These exceptions are: sal ser ser sé ten come ven verbs derived from the infinite above are also exceptions. some examples are: desdecir, maldecir, deshacer, suponer, compositr, maintenance, convention, etc. sometimes one or more pronouns (me, te, le, nos, os, les, lo, la) accompany the command form: send me the letter, or send it (the letter) to me.: mándame the card. The paper. or mándamela. mándenmela. in this case, in Do-it-commands, the pronoun or the pronouns follow the form of the verb and are also attached to it, which represents an exception from the general rule that the pronoun or the pronouns always precede the conjugated verb. adding one or two pronouns at the end of the verb would change the syllable that brings the stress of the word (when a word ends in a vowel, n or s, is the second syllable from the end that brings the stress,) and therefore you have to put an accent on the syllable that had the stress before adding the pronouns, in the case of mándamela the card. a (nda.) in negative or Don't-do-it-comands the position of the pronoun follows the general rule, which means it is located in front of the command module: do not send me the letter. or don't send it to me. No, I'm sending the card. I don't have the card. No, I'm the mandes. the imperative (imperative,) also imperative commands, express requests, orders and requests addressed directly to one or more people. there are several conjugations for the tú, otedes, otedes, nosotros andforms. Discover the imperative commands in Spanish grammar with Lingolia grammar rules. Master the conjugation of all kinds of verb and forms then test your grammatical skills in the exercises. We use the imperative of: make suggestions or proposals; Example: ¡Paremos a taxi! Let's stop a taxi! give orders; Example: ¡Subid! Get in! Take us to the station! give advice; Example: He's got a taxi. If you're in a hurry, order a taxi. make requests; Example: Tell me the direction. Tell me the address. The verbs in the imperative are often used along with courteous phrases such as por favor. However, it is important to remember that in Spanish the tone of the voice can communicate almost as much as the content of the sentence itself. Example: ¡Llévanos a la estación, por favor! Take us to the station, please. The imperative form in Spanish exists for the first plural person (nosotros/-as), the second singular and plural person (tú, vosotros/-as) and the polyta form used in singular and plural (usted/-es). The imperative is always conjugated without a personal pronoun and in the present tense, both in the indicative and subjunctive atmosphere. 2nd singular person (tú) To combine the imperative in the second singular person (tú) we use the third singular form of this indicative. However, to form a negative imperative, we use the unique form of the second person of the present subjunction. The personal pronoun is not used. Irregularforms in the second individual To combine the positive imperative for the second plural person (vosotros) we take the infinite and replace the -r with a -d. In the negative form, we take the second plural person of this joint, omitting the personal pronoun. The imperative form of verb leave arose caused controversy among experts in Spanish grammar. The rule states that when conjugating the imperative, the second plural person of the verb (vosotros) loses the final -d when we add the pronoun os. However, the verb is an exception to this rule because it is such a short word. In contemporary Spanish, the conjugation recommended by Real Academia Española (RAE) is «idos»: irse: id + os = idos However, in Spanish spoken daily life will feel the form «iros», which RAE considered valid due to its widespread use. To combine the imperative in the educated form (used), we use the third singular person of this subjunction both for positive and negative forms, omitting the personal pronoun. In order to combine an imperative in the plural educated form, we use the third plural person of this conjunctive, omitting the personal pronoun. To combine the imperative in the first plural person (nosotros) we use the plural form of the first person of this subjunction both for positive and negative forms, omitting personal pronounce. In the positive form of the imperative, the reflective pronoun (and also the pronoun of the object) is attached to theRemember: in the first plural person we dare s; Example: I'm drunk! Fix our belts! (not: abrochémosnos) in the second plural person we omits d; Example: I'll be here. Buckle up! (not: abrochados) In negative imperatives, reflexive pronouns appear after denial no and before the verb; Example: No abroches el cinturón. Don't stare at the seat belt. If a reflective verb in the imperative appears along with a pronoun of direct object, this is placed after the reflective pronoun in a positive phrase. In a negative phrase the direct pronoun of the object appears after the reflective pronoun and before the verb. Example: Abróchate el cinturón. Fix the belt. → Abróchatelo. Put it on. No abroches el cinturón. Don't stare at the seat belt. → Nothing abroches you. Don't stare at him. When a sentence is formed in the imperative that uses pronouns of direct or indirect objects (DO or IO), the pronouns are attached to the end of the verb. Example: Looking for the ventana. (DO) → Ciérrala. Close it. (2 single person) Buy a helado at ella. (IO) → Cómprale un helado. Buy her an ice cream. (2 single person) Buy a helado at ella. (DO + IO) → Cómpraselo. Buy one. (2nd singular person) If the sentence is negative, the pronouns come before the verb. Example: No la cierres. Don't close it. No, I'll buy you a helado. Don't buy her an ice cream. I don't understand. Don't buy it. If the verb is also reflective,a positive imperative the reflective pronoun is attached to the end of the verb before, followed by the pronoun of the direct object. Example: Abórcharse el cinturón. (DO) → Abróchatelo. Put it on. (2nd singular person) In the case of a negative imperative, the reflective pronoun comes after the denial not followed by the direct pronoun of the object. Example: Nothing abroches you. Don't stare at him. (2nd singular person) The form to + infinite can replace the imperative in the second singular and plural person: Example: the callari! Silence! ¡A correr! Run!
