Once you are sick to death for the harvesting of peas, crumbling it on the border or dodge the bullets from rival drug bands, you can delete games from Facebook. The games are a type of app, so you can use the same information to get rid of other apps that you no need. This step-by-step guide will help you withdraw from agriculture or will allow you to give up a life of crime: access your Facebook account. Click the "Account" tab at the top right of the page. Select "Privacy Settings" from the Left List. The lower part of the page, in "apps and websites", choose "Edit your settings." On the "Choose Privacy Settings Settings" page, click the "Edit Settings" box that matches "app you use". Once the list of the app you use arrive, click on the right game you want to remove. You will be asked to confirm that you want to eliminate the game. Confirm, the game will no longer be displayed on your profile or on the app page and will not have access to your information. Maybe you will still like life on the border but it's tired of people who ask for your help with their group wars? There are a couple of ways to keep the game notifications to show on your Facebook page. The simplest method is to hide them. Shortly after a post from a game shows your wall you don't want to see again, follow these steps: click on x next to your home page. Select "Hide everything" -> "I". This will keep all notifications from that game, app or person - if you want to hide someone - to show on your home page. I now know how to eliminate the games, but have they always been good idea to start? On the next page, we will explore the safety of Facebook games and apps. Top 5 Facebook Games according to February 2011 statistics (as measured by users active per month, or MAU), the five most popular games on Facebook were Farmville Virtual World Games, 55.502, 307 Mau; Texas Holdem Poker Card and Casino Games, 36,854,573 mau; Frontierville games of the virtual world, 28.380.967 Mau; Game Mafia Game Games and Strategy Games, 23.388.135 Mau; And Cafaj - World Virtual World Games, 18,240,550 Mau [Source: Facebook]. -> Play Game Play Mine Blocks Game Online.
