There are several places on the web where you can find keywords that people type into the Google search box. One of the most popular sources of this information is Google Keyword Planner. Unfortunately, the paid advertising data provided by Google Keyword Planner is on the Google Ads platform. The keywords you find using this tool may be too general and not very meaningful. In other words, hardly useful for content marketing, blogging or SEO. The Keyword Planner does not use Google Keyword Planner to generate keyword suggestions. We find the keywords that people search for on Google through another source, Google Autocomplete. Google Autocomplete, the data source used by the Keyword Tool, was developed by Google to make your searches easier and faster. Basically, Google will show autocomplete suggestions when you start typing something into the Google search box. It's in Google's best interest to show the most relevant keywords in autocomplete suggestions. Keywords that help Google retrieve the most relevant web pages and help users find the most relevant content for their search query. Here's what Google says about autocomplete predictions:   Autocomplete predictions are automatically generated by an algorithm, without human intervention, based on a number of objective factors, including how many times previous users have searched for an item. Have you noticed that you can't use Keyword Planner without a Google Ads account? There's a reason for that. Keyword Planner - is a tool for advertisers and not for content creation or SEO. Yes, it contains valuable keyword data such as competition, MSRP, average monthly search volume, etc. But at the same time, it hides profitable long-term keywords with thousands of monthly searches that can be used to create content for your homepage. Somemarketing experts believe this is done on purpose to help Google increase competition and CPC for a limited number of keywords. Keyword Planner is the best alternative to Google Keyword Planner for content marketing and SEO because it does not hide popular keywords that can be used to create content for your website. If you want your website to attract traffic from Google or other search engines, you need to make sure that it contains content created using the right keywords. This means that when searching for similar content, products or services online, you should use words that your potential audience is already using. The best way to discover these keywords, as thousands of successful websites and online businesses have done, is to use keywords from Google search suggestions to create content for your website. By creating content based on popular keywords that your audience uses to search for information online, you provide a lot of value to your website visitors. In return, Google ranks your site higher, which means more traffic. If you are looking for keywords in languages other than English, the Keyword Planner features will be of great help. The Keyword Suggester allows you to fetch keywords from 192 Google domains and use 83 Google language interfaces to generate keyword suggestions. In this way, we ensure that the generated keywords are relevant to the country and/or language for which you create content. Our Paid Subscription - Keyword Tool Pro and Keyword Tool API fully supports all Google domains and languages, and provides highly accurate Google Ads search volume, cost-per-click, and competition data for keywords in all 192 supported countries, 50,236 individual locations, and 46 languages . The right keywords will attract the right audience to your website. Showing your ads to users who enter relevant keywords will increase your click-through rate (CTR), lower cost-per-click (CPC), and higher conversion rates for your business. As a result, you'll spend less money on advertising and get a higher return on investment.
