OneTouch Ultra is a blood glucose monitoring device for people with diabetes and is the basic product for the OneTouch Ultra family of LifeScan blood glucose monitoring systems. OneTouch Ultra Blood Glucose meters deliver blood glucose test results in five seconds, offer alternative testing options, and various memory and flaging functions. The results are displayed as plasma values. OneTouch meters are sold in kits containing a carrying case, a forwarding device, a control solution, quantity of hand samples and a spare cap for use with the sampling device when using alternative site testing. The OneTouch Ultra 2 Meter is similar in the design and operation of the OneTouch Ultra Meter, but also offers first and after meal flags, comments and a list style memory recall. King advertising campaigns had type 2 diabetes for 10 years. She was in an advertising campaign for OneTouch Ultra, describing how she feels blue from diabetes. There was also an advertisement with him and Matthew Cooper, a young musician from Boulder, Colorado who had type 1 diabetes since age one and also plays blues music. [1] The campaign promoted the use of alternative testing of the site. B.B. King also worked in collaboration with the American competitor Idol, Crystal Bowersox (who was also diagnosed with type 1) diabetes to spread awareness about diabetes. King and Bowersox were also involved in the LifeFirst Diabetes awareness campaign through OneTouch Ultra.[2][3] Labelle Patti had diabetes for 12 years. She was in an advertising campaign for OneTouch Ultra 2 Meter, describing how she collapsed on stage and found out she had diabetes. Labels re-recorded its 1980 hit "New attitude" for one of the advertisements. OneTouch has been in the past the main sponsor of Inverness Caledonian Thistle, highlighting the presence of LifeScan as an important employer in the city.
