Wikimedia List article In Association Football, a goalie is said to "keep a clean sheet" if they prevent their opponents from scoring any goal during a whole game. Since the formation of the Premier League at the beginning of the 1992nd season, the sixteen goalkeepers managed to keep a hundred or more clean sheets in the Premier League. Peter Schmeichel was the first doorman to keep hundreds of sheets clean and Peter 140; ech is the only player to hold 200. [1] He also took the less western games to reach 100 clean sheets,[2] holds the record for most of the clean sheets kept in a single season, with 24. [3][4] The record for consecutive clean sheets is held by Edwin van der Sar, who went to fourteen games without concession in 2008th to 128; for Manchester United. [5] The first porters to keep a clean sheet in the Premier League were Tim Flowers and Ian Walker on the opening day of the inaugural season, in an 0128; the balance between Southampton and Tottenham Hotspur; All the other doormen admitted it that day. Every year, the goalie who keeps the sheets cleaner during the Premier League season receives the Premier League Golden Glove Award. First presented in 2004th, nine porters won the prize, with Joe Hart and Peter 140; who share the record for most wins, with four. Bold players show players who still play in the Premier League.
