You will find Shots, Titles and Logos folders here, all with placeholders for you to edit.To edit text, open up the "Titles" folder. Note: The folder might be named something slightly different. Select and double-click a file to open the Editor, and change it to whatever you would like.The title names (Title 1, Title 2, etc) correspond to where in the sequence they pop up. Starting from the beginning, you can customize them as they go, and delete ones that you don't need.To edit the media in the background (pictures or videos), open the "Shots" folder. Note: The folder might be named something slightly different. You should have the media you need for your template already saved in a separate folder. Create a new folder on your computer, place all of your media files in it, and drag and drop into your Projects tab under the folders mentioned above.From here, select the "Placeholder" you would like to replace with a media file, and drag-and-drop the file you want onto your sequence, either above the placeholder, or completely replacing it.Resize this if you need to under the "Effect Controls" tabTo see the finished result, you need to get back to the main file. Do this by clicking on the "render" composition on your editing timeline, or clicking on the file under the "Final" folder.There you have it — 45 free, fun Adobe Premiere Pro templates that are guaranteed to bring your video to life, and a quick lesson on how to get started using them right away.
