Today I try to use Oracle Client 64 and Unsuccessful Connection Identifier which is defined on TNSNames.ora File. I suppose you try to connect the 32-bit Oracle server using SQL Developer 64 bit. It will work on a 32-bit or 64-bit Windows operating system. The JDK bit level that you install will determine whether it works as a 32-bit or 64-bit application. This download does not include the requested JDK JDK Oral. You will have to install it if it is not already on your machine. My Java house is 64 bit. The new JDK 32-bit installed is not set to Java at home. I need to open $ user_dir \ appdata \ roaming \ sqldelover \ version \ product.conf remove the setjavahome line c:\ java \ jdk1.8.0_201 start sqldelover.exe instead of sqldelover64w.exe new popup will be displayed and choose Java Home A New version JDK (32 bit Mine). C:\ Programs (X86) \ Java \ JDK1.8.0_201 My Guasto, the SQLDeveloper64W.EXE Pins at the Taskbar, because this error occurred after moving the cursor and it was SQLDeveloper64W. Exe, I try to click SQLDeveloper.exe, then I found out my setting went well. So check that maybe it happened on your system. If sqldelover.exe does not work, try to choose sqldelover64w.exe. Now I can call my defined connection identifier on TNSNames.ora using the new SQL Developer 32-bit mode. Go to the Oracle Java archive page.
