New facebook now

The only thing you'll need besides a birthday, a name and a genre is an email address. First, go to www.facebook.com and look on the right side of your screen under the heading "signature". Fill in the information and click the green "sign". After typing words to show you are human (as directed,) Facebook will ask if you want to find your friends. It's a good idea to do it now, but don't worry, you can always come back to this step later. Follow the tips to allow Facebook to take advantage of your email service for people you sent emails that are also on Facebook. Click the boxes next to those you want to add. (Here is a philosophical point: Now is a good time to decide if you are going to friends from work.) Then, it's time to create your profile. In general, the more detailed your profile, the easier it will be for you to find people and for people to find you. It is worth taking your time when you enter your high school information, college and employer (as required). Then, as required, include a photo of yourself, or by clicking the button to upload a photo that already exists on your computer, or automatically taking a hit with the embedded computer or the connected webcam. In general, people tend to use informal images that do a good job of showing their face, but your profile picture can be anything under the sun -- until it is rated PG-13 or below. Now is the time to navigate through your profile, adding any information you think is(click the pencil-shaped icon "destination profile" at the top right.) In this and all on Facebook, most people love to let their personalities show. By exploring the various slots where you can add profile information - for example, philosophy, "activity and interests" and sports -- consider taking time to be honest and accurate. In the end, your Facebook profile will be as unique as you are. The final step before Facebook lets you start sharing content is confirming registration through your email account. Just go to the email you have listed on the first registration page, open the message from Facebook, and click on "Sign it Full". Voila! You are fully operational, or at least ready to start surfing around the many features of Facebook. Then, we'll look a little closer to finding your friends. Page 2lf you've been on Facebook for any time, you've probably been caught, Superpoked, had a sheep thrown to you, received a drink ride or was bitten by a vampire. These viral applications have entertained us for a while, but now Facebook has created new ways for users to waste time at work and school -- social game. Social games stand out from regular games (one you could play on your computer or through a separate website) because they engage your network of friends. Instead of throwing sheep or zombies each other, friends compete at games like Scrabble, bowling and mini-golf. And unlike viral applicationswhere users simply send strange things, social games grow more organically. Since most of the game results placed on the wall, the entire network will notice that you are playing a certain game. Some of the simulation-based games may also ask you to collaborate with your friends to complete certain tasks. Friends can invite themselves to beat their scores, and many games also offer taunts and "smack talk" that they post to the user wall, attracting even more people to join. This brainless fun means serious money for game developers. Facebook games are on track to make $500 million in 2009 [source: Eldon.] Some game developers make money through traditional advertising, but many use the real game to generate revenue. For example, players can purchase virtual assets such as poker chips or clothes for their avatar to move forward in the game. We will see some games using these virtual assets (together with your very real money) in the following list of the five best games. YoVille is a virtual world for teenagers and adults, and has 5.5 million Facebook users per month. You build an avatar, usually one that a little looks like you (except that it has a giant head and a tiny body.) At first, your character has a limited amount of clothes and accessories it can wear. This is gonna change while you take on virtual money. Your YoVille character starts in his apartment, and with the mouse you can move it by clicking on the doors. As the name suggests, your character lives in the city of YoVille, whicha bank, gym, casino, restaurant, nightclubs, shops and even a pet shelter, if you want your avatar to get a pet. A factory on the outskirts of the city provides your character with employment -- more money you earn, more stuff you can buy. If your friends have installed the application, you can socialize with them in YoVille. Or you can make new friends in YoVille walking towards someone else's character and starting a chat. If everything is okay, you can add that person as a friend. Your friends can visit your apartment, or you can meet at the restaurant or at the nightclub. Your YoVille game can continue indefinitely. It is constantly adding new features and locals to the game. Your YoVille character can live a lonely life. But it's better if you start or join a "cross." The bigger your crew, the more money you earn at work, which means you get to buy more important things. There's really no strategy for Lil Green Patch. Plant things in your garden and send your friends to plant in them, hoping they will return the favor. Presumably, for every 10 friends you send a plant, you will save a square foot of rainforest. Donations are possible through advertising dollars. The more plants you send, the more people you get to sign and that means more eyes on the ads. To keep your Lil Green Patch, you need some supplies. Of course these are available in the store, where you can make purchases with GreenBucks. You will receive GreenBucks every time you tend to ayou can also remove plants from your garden and sell them in the marketplace. lil green patch is a simple game: Plant flowers and fruits with your friends and save the rainforest at the same time. lil green patch simulates a garden in your profile. While you tend to your garden and help friends tend to their, sponsors donate money to the nature conservation program adopts an acre and other reforestation projects. the developers of lil green patch state that, to date, have saved more than 59,098,167 square feet (5,490,399 square meters) of rainforest on the embroidery coast bone peninsula [source: lil green patch.] the game has 5,6 million facebook visitors per month. Let's play virus! some facebook users report viruses or spyware downloads during the game. These destructive programs can disable the game, send spam, infect an entire computer -- the varieties of attacks are almost endless, since facebook games are hosted and maintained by third-party developers, hackers can enter those servers and load games with bad surprises. experts strongly recommend installing anti-virus and anti-spyware applications on your computer. you may have noticed posts like this on the walls of your friends, "Pete smith asked for help against a rival family in mafia wars," and wondered what was going on. It is about mafia wars, a social game with more than 9,6 million monthly users [source: inside social games.] the object of mafia wars is to make your way up to godfather fromtasks and get your friends to play the game. mafia wars has three main points of play -- rank, fighting and respect. to ascend into the game you need to increase these, which happens through recruiting other players and friends to your family, earning virtual money from criminal activities, arming your family with weapons, and fighting other mafia families. See? Have fun in clean family. when you start playing the game, an old man named luco drives you long. will show you how to recruit your facebook friends to the game and offer other tips on how to build a big family. the game is based on text -- not a simulation or virtual world. Click the actions and then collect your family to help you. Then you split all the money. the game tracks your activities, and whenever you need a hand, you can send requests to the wall. the best facebook game developers in the race for facebook gaming revenue, two companies have emerged as frontrunners. on inside social games' top 25 facebook games for May 2009, the company playfish appears seven times. his games include no. 2-ranked pet society, as well as geo challenge, word challenge, which has the largest brain, bowling buddies, restaurant city and minigolf party. zynga is the next best represented, with five out of the top 25. his games include the texas holdem poker of 1 rank, then mafia wars, yoville, wars and street racing. industry employees are watching playdom, which is a success on myspace and is aboutmake a move towards Facebook [source: Inside Facebook]. Pet Society is another virtual world game, aimed both at children and adults. With almost 11 million monthly users, it is a great favorite on Facebook [source: Inside Social Games.] When you first sign in to Pet Society, create a custom pet. Choose its appearance, from its fur color to the color of its eyes. Then you call him and keep playing. Your pet has its own home, which you can decorate yourself. As with YoVille, only some accessories are open to you at the beginning. Unlock the most fancier objects by advancing in the game. Pet Society measures your animal's well-being through health, happiness and hygiene levels. It is up to you to keep these levels high by feeding your pet and giving it a bath. You can also earn coins by playing with your pet and exchange those coins in the bank to buy cool stuff to keep your pet even happier. Another way to earn coins is by participating in advertising surveys. If you do not like to put in time, you can buy coins through PayPal, credit card or even billing your mobile phone. Your pet can wander around the neighborhood and meet other pets. To invite friends to join Pet Society, you can book houses for them near their own in the neighborhood. You can also keep a photo album of your pet and share it with others. A running score on the bottom of the Pet Society screen keeps you and your friends learned about who has the most gold coins. Scrabulous vs. Scrabble One of the mostgames on facebook in 2008 was scrabulous. because the game looked like scrabble, it was closed by hasbro and mattel. after the courts forced removal of the popular game, scrabble released its facebook version. Unfortunately, the game has performed badly due to licenses and technical problems. recently, scrabulous made his return to facebook with the new moniker lexulous. with few changes to the interface, it keeps the feeling of scrabble but does not violate any copyright. with over 12 million monthly users, texas holdem is currently the most popular game on facebook. the concept is simple -- online poker. What makes it different on facebook? Once again, you can play with your facebook friends or choose to go against complete strangers. every day when you access the game, you get free poker chips to start. there are some ways to get more chips. Obviously, you can win them the old-fashioned way -- in a poker game. But if you need a lot of rush, maybe to participate in a high-level tournament? Here's how texas holdem poker brings in. you can earn chips by participating in sponsored activities. For example, taking a survey for a gps company can earn 8,000 free chips. sign up for a directv membership process and receive a whopping 422,000 chips! you can also purchase chips with real money -- via paypal, credit card or billing your mobile phone. just like any casino, texas holdem poker makes it easy for you to get money asas much as possible, without leaving the game room. And just like every mess, there's always someone trying to scare you. The scammers can trick users into giving away their login information. Then they'll come into that person's account and transfer all their chips to a different account. Facebook lists some advice on being vigilant -- how "do not give login information to anyone, ever.
