[5] According to the Survey Indian Readership (IRS) Q2 2019, Eenadu classifies the eighth among the Indian newspapers More widespread with total readers (TR) of 1.6 14.105, [4] was founded by Ramoji Rao in 1974. Edition The various editions of Eenadu exist throughout the region of Telugu Parliament of India which constitute the states of Andhra Pradesh, Telangana, Karnataka and New Delhi, as well as in the city like Chennai, Bengalauru, Mumbai, and New Delhi. History The first days in Visakhapatnam initially, Eenadu's circulation was limited. When launched in the city of Visakhapatnam, he was unable to sell more than 3,000 copies a week. [6] Eenadu founded himself fighting to become a daily publication between publication. However, it was popular in some regions and rivals it was still a problem. Eenadu took over a new series of administrators to be part of his decision-making and key management group who drove him to what is today: the most widespread newspaper in the region. Eenadu was launched by Visakhapatnam on August 10, 1974 by Ramoji Rao, a businessman who had previously achieved success with Priya Sofine and Margating Chitfunds. At that time, the Andhra Prabha, the property of the Indian Express group, was the main regional newspaper. Expansion to other regions Eenadu has begun with a print order of 4,000 copies, made up of hand and produced using a second-hand print print. But when it was admitted to the audit Bureau of Circlacs in 1976, his circulation had already reached a reader of 48,000. In 1978, Eenadu exceeded the circulation of Andhra Prabha and, in 1995, two other rivals Andhra Patrika and U-dayam bent, leaving Eenadu with over 77% of the controlled circulation of the Dailing of Telugu. When Eenadu expanded to Hyderabad in 1975, he divided the city into target areas, he recruited the delivery of boys three months in advance and delivered the sheet freely for a week. During the 1980s, technology has allowed Eenadu to spread over larger areas beyond the main cities. Previously, it was difficult to manage even the three editions of the 70s (The Visakhapatnam, Vijayawada and Hyderabad Editions) because the unique communication structures available for publication at the time of telegram, telephone and teleprinter, all with limited presence in the Rural Andhra Pradesh. Additional publications with the introduction of offset printing, photocomposition and computer software, Eenadu was able to launch editions in smaller cities like Tirupathi in 1982. From 1980, Eenadu's news publisher has supervised a ' Huge collection of local news and disclosed Hyderabad office. At the end of the 1980s, there were six substantial newspapers Running, and the business was highly competitive. In 1989 Eenadu introduced "District Daily (Tabloid Edition)" to bring his presence not only in district cities like Rajahmundry, Karimnagar, Guntur and Adilabad, but also Cities like Surryapet and Tadepanligudem. Each publishing center required forty engineers to perform its printing presses. Newspapers of Eenadu district were based on market research which claimed that the heavy local content would generate new groups of readers and increase advertising revenue. Currently, the district dailies print local news specifically for every important position in the area, so eliminating the need for separate room every day. A few special sections are published each weekday. [7] Eenadu later has ventured into other markets such as Finance and Chit funds (eg Margadarsi Chits), Food (Proiazioni Priya), Film Production (Film Ushakiran), the film distribution (Mayuri Films)) and television (ETV). All companies are organized under Ramoji Group.
