Image: Skeeze/Pixabay What is a job, really? Well, of course, it is something that you go off to and work at most days, and hopefully, it is something that you enjoy or at least that you don't totally hate. A job is not only something that you do to make money and support yourself or your family, but it's also something that you hopefully do because you're interested in it, and that offers you something of value.But how would you describe your job to others if you wanted them to understand what you did for a living? What words would you choose so they knew exactly what you did for work? What if you only had a few words to help them figure out what you did? What if you had only three words to use? If you were a police officer, you might say the words "gun, badge, and handcuffs." If you played basketball for a living, you might say "ball, court, and hoop." If you were a landscaper, it might be "lawnmower, rake, and shears." You see where we are going this? We will give you three words, and you pick what job we are talking about. Just do it at home, when you're not working, or you might need a new job yourself. Now it's time to show you know jack about the tools of EVERY trade!There are some common tools which are used across professions, sometimes with slight modifications to suit the particular job. These same tools tend to be the ones you would find in your own toolbox, kitchen junk drawer or even among the items you use in your daily grooming routine. If you have a clue which ones we are thinking of, then you could definitely hit the nail on the head with this quiz!Of course, many of the tools professionals use are designed specifically for the tasks they perform. They come in all shapes and sizes and they usually require special training and skills to use them. Once you see them, there is no question as to which job they are used for. That chart you have to stand 20 feet away from and call out the letters written on it is a good example. There's only one profession which uses that! Think you know which one it is? Work your way through the quiz and see if you are right!Ready to put your quiz-taking reputation on the line? Come show you are the master of ALL trades and the tools they use - take the quiz, now!
