Before driving in the UK, it's essential to be aware of the Low Emission Zones that have been adopted throughout the country. There are defined areas where higher polluting vehicles are charged or restricted for entry. In the UK, the first LEZ was introduced in 2008 and included the entire Greater London area, but it only affected lorries/trucks, coaches, buses, and vans. Today, there are clean air zones in many UK cities, and both cars and motorbikes are affected by the UK government regulations as well. Buy vignette Understanding the emission regulations as they apply to residents and foreigners alike is a must for driving in the UK. As it can be complicated, this guide will explain all the ins and outs of the British LEZ. Low Emissions Zones UK, also referred to as LEZ, or sometimes Clean Air Zone (CAZ), are terms that are used interchangeably. They are areas in British cities that drivers of higher-polluting vehicles must pay to drive through. The goal is to encourage drivers to use vehicles that do not pollute as much, or switch to public transport. These low emission zones are used in many European countries to help improve air quality in more congested areas. In London, there are fees for the Ultra Low Emission Zone (ULEZ) and a Congestion Charge. They have different operating hours and purposes in addition to affecting different vehicles. The key difference between the ULEZ and the Congestion Charge is that the ULEZ focuses on vehicle emissions. These rules apply to all vehicles that don't meet certain emission standards regardless of where they are in the British capital. The Congestion Charge is mainly a traffic management tool. Vehicles that enter a certain central London zone during peak hours, no matter what their emissions levels, are charged. That means that vehicles can be subject to both types of fees if they don't meet the ULEZ standards and also enter a Congestion Charge Zone. ULEZ. This covers all boroughs in London with the exception of the M25. This applies 24 hours a day, 365 days a day, except Christmas Day. Congestion Charge: This covers the central London area. It's in operation between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, and 12 noon through 6 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays, and bank holidays. Buy vignette The Clean Air Zones (CAZ) or Low Emission Zones (LEZ) are policies developed by the British government to try and reduce air pollution and improve air quality. The reduced car use, and ultimately lower pollution that results, has been associated in scientific research with a reduction in cardiovascular outcomes in particular, such as strokes and heart disease. London's LEZ was launched in 2008 and is the oldest of the capital's emission control schemes. A September 2021 mayor's report noted that the "emissions standards for the scheme have increased over time so it has progressively made a significant contribution to improving air quality." Even before higher standards were officially launched, increasing from Euro IV to Euro VI, there were high levels of compliance resulting in improvements to the city's air quality. There has been a significant rise in European-wide LEZ, with many countries throughout the continent (and beyond) installing LEZs with the long-term goal of improving public health. That includes: France Denmark Germany Spain The Low Emission Zones (LEZ)/Clean Air Zones (CAZ) in the British capital cover most of Greater London. This is in operation every day of the year, 24 hours a day. Keep in mind that the LEZ is separate from the Ultra Low Emission Zone (ULEZ), which as we explained, operates in the same zone, covering all London boroughs other than the M25. It is focused on vehicle emissions, applying to all higher-polluting vehicles everywhere in Greater London. BUY Additionally, the Congestion Charge covering the central London area is a traffic management tool. That means vehicles entering specific zones in London during peak hours will be charged regardless of their emissions levels. It is in operation from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and from 12 noon through 6 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays, and bank holidays. There are many other cities in the UK with Low Emission/Clean Air Zones. Birmingham: Effective on June 1, 2021, and in operation 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, the Birmingham LEZ covers an area of the city center within the A4540 Middleway. Oxford: The first phase of the Oxford LEZ began in February 2022. It covers a central area of the city center although a wider zone is expected in the near future. Glasgow: Covering a one-square-mile area in the city center, the Glasgow LEZ launched in June 2023. It's bordered by the River Clyde to the south, the M8 motorway to the west and north, and High Street/Saltmarket to the east. It also includes the University of Strathclyde, the Glasgow School of Art, and Glasgow Caledonian University. Bath: The LEZ in Bath was officially launched on March 5, 2021. The Class C LEZ targets the most polluting vehicles such as lorries/trucks, vans, coaches, buses, and taxis. It covers High Common and Royal Victoria Park to the northwest and extends east to the Bathwick area and King Edward's School campus. It also covers the A36 road and some turnoffs, and parts of Wells Road and Oldfield Road. Bradford: Established in September 2022, the Bradford LEZ includes the area inside and including the Bradford outer ring road. It also extends along the Aire Valley corridor. (Manningham Lane/Bradford Road and Canal Road area) to include Shipley and Saltaire. Portsmouth: Officially launched in November 2021, the Portsmouth LEZ covers approximately two square miles to the southwest of town extending to Portsmouth Harbour on the westernmost side. Manchester: The Greater Manchester area, including the city of Manchester, does not have a LEZ with its proposed plan canceled in favor of an investment-led approach to clean air. Aberdeen: The LEZ Aberdeen was unveiled in 2022, however, it was not officially enforced until June 1, 2024. At that point, only compliant cars and vans have been allowed in the city center. The LEZ covers a small, central area around Castlegate to the east, and the Union Street area to the west, with the main train and bus station outside of the zone. Dundee: The Dundee LEZ was introduced in 2022, also with a two-year grace period that recently ended on June 1, 2024. It is located within the A991 Inner Ring Road in the city center. It excludes the Bell Street, West Marketgait NCP, and Wellgate car parks. As the ring road is not part of the LEZ, Tay Road Bridge can be accessed by all vehicles. Edinburgh: The Low Emission Zone Edinburgh officially began on June 1, 2024. It primarily covers the heart of the city, including the city center and popular areas like Princes Street, Old Town, and Waverly Station, with the northern boundary at Queen Street, extending towards Holyrood House to the east. Newcastle: Launched on January 30, 2023, the Newcastle LEZ covers the city center and routes over the River Tyne. Private cars and motorbikes are exempt from charges as the regulations target more polluting, older vehicles such as trucks/lorries, coaches, buses, vans, and taxis. Sheffield: Established on February 27, 2023, Sheffield also affects the more heavily-polluting vehicles with its LEZ covering the city center area within the boundary of A61 plus the University of Sheffield on its westernmost side, extending to a small part of the A57 at its easternmost end. To help you get a better understanding of the LEZs and CAZs in the UK's major cities, we've provided a map highlighting these areas: To determine whether or not you need to pay a LEZ charge zone in the UK, you can use the Transport for London (TfL) website. All you have to do is enter your registration number to see if your vehicle meets the required emission standards. If it does not, you will have to pay the charge when driving within the LEZ/CAZ zone. Keep in mind that larger vehicles are more likely to be affected by LEZ charges. All cities in the UK have different prices and rules for their environmental zones. However, you can pay the LEZ or CAZ charge multiple ways in any of them. That includes: Online. Pay with a debit or credit card at gov.uk Phone. Call the National Contact Centre Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., or Saturday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 0300 029 8888. Payments can be made up to six days in advance of your visit, on the day of your visit, or as many as six days after your visit. The charge period is from midnight to midnight. The fee must be paid by 11:59 p.m. on the sixth day after driving into a LEZ. If you do not pay within that time frame, you are likely to receive a penalty charge notice (PCN). In the UK, there are different penalty structures for non-payment of fines depending on the city, again, each city sets its own rules. Penalty charges are higher in London. Smaller vehicles may be charged £100 daily or a £500 PCN but larger vehicles face a daily charge of £200 or a £1,000 PCN for non-payment. In Aberdeen and Glasgow, the initial penalty is £60, but it's reduced by 50% if it's paid within 14 days. The UK does require some vehicles to display environmental badge stickers depending on where they're going and their particular license plate. For example, vehicles registered outside of the UK when driving in London must pay a daily charge or meet the emission standards. If you believe your vehicle meets those standards, it can be registered with the EPC plate and you will receive an email with the outcome. Tollway can register the license plate of your passenger car, van, motorcycle, minibus, coach, or heavy goods vehicle. This is a quick, convenient way to handle the process with prices for a standard car in London, for example, starting at £39.95. BUY The cost to enter a LEZ or CAZ can range from zero to £300, depending on your vehicle and the particular zone. For example, in London's ULEZ most charges are much less for cars as compared to heavy goods vehicles that don't meet the emission standards which are charged the maximum £300. Drivers of all cars, vans, and motorcycles up to 3.5 tons that don't meet the emission standards are required to pay a £12.50 charge per day. Certain vehicles are exempt from the LEZ and CAZ charges, including those that meet the following criteria. Be aware that if your vehicle is exempt based on any of these criteria but is registered outside of the UK, you will have to register but you are still exempt. Specialist vehicles primarily built for off-road use but occasionally use roads for limited purposes such as tractors, mowing machines, and farm machinery Vehicles operated by the Ministry of Defence Vehicles with historic tax class Vehicles built before 1973 Look for road signs indicating the entry into a LEZ or CAZ. These are usually marked with symbols and text, and you may receive notifications via navigation systems. Non-payment can result in a penalty charge notice (PCN), which could lead to increased fines and legal action if ignored. Typically, older diesel and petrol vehicles that do not meet specific Euro emission standards are affected. You can check your vehicle's emission standards and compare it with the LEZ requirements on government websites or use specific portals. Yes, fines are enforceable even for non-UK residents, and non-payment may cause issues if you visit the UK in the future. To contest a fine, follow the instructions on the penalty notice. This usually involves submitting an appeal with evidence proving your claim. If the classification is incorrect, you should contact the issuing authority immediately with evidence (e.g., vehicle registration documents) to correct the error and contest any penalties. According to Public Health England, air pollution is the largest environmental threat to health in the UK, and long-term exposure to air pollution is responsible for around 30,000 deaths per year. In direct response to this, many local councils across the UK have introduced clean air zones - to improve the air quality inside their cities. These zones, termed CAZ (clean air zones) or LEZ (low emissions zones), have restrictions on what vehicles can drive freely through them, charging non-compliant vehicles varying amounts, ranging from £2 to £12.50 per day. What is a Low Emissions Zone? To alleviate the air pollution problem in the UK's major cities, many low emissions zones have been created. The aim of these zones is to reduce the number of high-emissions cars entering a city, by making drivers pay a daily fee. As with London's congestion charge, the zones often began as a small area in the very heart of the city, which slowly expanded over the years, allowing residents and visitors to adapt to the new restrictions. As it would not be possible to entirely ban cars that do not meet the zones' criteria, a fee is usually charged per day of travel. For example, to drive into London's ULEZ with a non-compliant car will cost £12.50 per day. What Cars Have to Pay in Low Emission Zones? The restriction criteria in all of the UK's zones are based on the Euro emissions standards. These were initially devised by the EU to improve the standard to which cars are manufactured, the Euro status of a car is determined by how polluting it is. Any car sold in the EU must meet the current Euro standard, the most important ones when discussing ULEZ are Euro 4 for petrol cars (introduced in 2006) and Euro 6 for diesel-engined cars (introduced in 2015). London's ULEZ The capital's low emissions zone is by far the biggest and most far-reaching, affecting around 9 million residents and even more visitors every day, in August 2023 it expanded to include every London borough. To enter the ULEZ zone without paying, your vehicle must meet Euro 6 standards for Diesels, and Euro 4 for Petrol cars. As a general rule, if your petrol car was built after 2006, or your diesel car was built after 2015, you should be good to go. EVs and almost all hybrids are exempt. To check for sure, use Transport for London's online tool. How much is the London ULEZ charge? If your car doesn't meet the above criteria, you'll need to pay the daily charge. It is £12.50 per day for cars and other passenger vehicles. For HGVs and buses, it's £100 per day. The ULEZ charge period resets at midnight, so if you enter at 23:30 and leave in the early hours, you'll need to pay twice. How to pay the London ULEZ charge? The TfL website allows you to enter your car registration number and date of travel for pre or post-payment. Payment can be made up to 3 days after entering the zone. Alternatively, you can sign your car up for automatic billing, this is recommended if you aren't sure if you'll enter a zone on your journey, as you will get billed automatically instead of receiving a fine. Birmingham's CAZ Introduced in 2021, the Clean Air Zone operates inside Birmingham's famous A4540 Middleway ring road. Its charging criteria are the same as the ULEZ - your vehicle must meet Euro 6 standards (2015+) for Diesels, and Euro 4 (2006+) for Petrol cars. To be 100% sure before you drive into Birmingham, use the gov.uk online checking tool before you travel. How much is the Birmingham CAZ charge? The Birmingham CAZ costs £9 for non-compliant petrol and diesel cars. This is operated 24/7 on every day of the year. Larger vehicles such as buses and HGVs pay £50. Just as the ULEZ, the charging period runs from midnight to midnight, meaning you'll have to pay £18 if your journey extends past midnight. How to pay the Birmingham CAZ charge? The general gov.uk clean air zone portal is the best tool for checking and paying CAZ charges. It allows you to pay up to 6 days before and after the journey. To check if your car will be charged, and pay the Birmingham CAZ fee, use the gov.uk website. Bath's CAZ The historical city of Bath has operated a clean air zone since 2021. It only affects commercial vehicles though, such as vans, taxis and HGVs. Normal passenger cars, diesel or petrol, are not charged. A map of the Bath CAZ can be viewed on the council website here. Portsmouth's CAZ Quite a large portion of Portsmouth's city centre is covered by the Clean Air Zone, which was introduced in November 2021. It is not charged to passenger vehicles, but only to taxis and HGVs. Taxis are charged £10 per day and HGVs £50. To view the full map check the council website. Bradford's CAZ Bradford, like Bath and Portsmouth, does not charge private passenger vehicles for entering its CAZ. Taxis are required to pay £7 and HGVs and buses £50 per day. To check where the CAZ in Bradford extends, check out the interactive map on the Bradford Council website. Bristol's CAZ Bristol has a relatively small Clean Air Zone. However, it does charge all vehicles that don't meet the criteria. As with most other zones that charge passenger cars, diesel-engine cars need to meet Euro 6, and Petrol Euro 4. How much is the Bristol CAZ fee? For passenger cars, it's £9 per day, whilst HGVs and buses pay £100. To check if your vehicle will be chargeable, and to pay the fee, use the government website. Sheffield's CAZ Launched in February 2023, the clean air zone spans a fairly sizable chunk of Sheffield city centre. Its rules are the same as most, charging cars Petrol and Diesel cars from post-2006 and post-2016 respectively. Sheffield.gov has some useful advice on how to avoid getting fined, including an online checker and interactive map. From here you can input a postcode to see if your journey will require CAZ approval. How much is the fee for Sheffield's CAZ? Sheffield's clean air zone is free for passenger cars currently, but plans have been made to introduce a fee based on the same requirements as other CAZ and ULEZ zones shortly. HGV and commercial vehicles currently need to pay £10 per day, though. Newcastle and Gateshead The TyneSide CAZ covers a fairly small area in the centre of Newcastle, and as with many of the other CAZ areas around the country, it is not yet charging passenger cars to enter it. Commercial vehicles, on the other hand, are required to pay £12.50 per day, the highest charge outside of London for such car types. Other CAZ zones So we've rounded up all of the current clean air and ultra-low emission zones in the country, but make sure to keep up to date with your local council's news, as there are many more planned, including: Manchester Edinburgh Dundee Aberdeen Liverpool Derby And quite a few more! Author - Joseph Law Joseph has been writing about cars for over seven years and writing for Bumper for over two years, blending his passion for automobiles with a talent for storytelling. Joseph has worked to passenger engineering and cars for Autotilla, Komspec, and several engineering manufacturers. When he's not writing or tinkering with one of his five cars, Joseph dreams of owning an Alfa Romeo 33 Stradale. To improve air quality, some local authorities are introducing clean air zones. If your vehicle exceeds emission standards, you may have to pay a charge if you drive in a clean air zone. There's a different way to check your vehicle if you want to drive in London's low or ultra low emission zones. The Mayor of London is responsible for the design and the delivery of the Ultra Low Emission Zone which covers almost all of the Greater London area.
