Buying a home always involves a few surprises. But in The Disappointments Room, the new residents of Blacker Manor get way more than they bargained for. Written by Wentworth Miller and D.J. Caruso, the film (in theaters Friday) follows an architect, her husband, and their young son as they move from Brooklyn to a dilapidated southern mansion to make a fresh start. As Dana (Kate Beckinsale) begins renovations, she discovers a secret room that isn't on the home's blueprints and starts to uncover the house's dark history.Adamsleigh features Tudor Revival details, such as the wrought-iron banister. Photo: Peter IovinoFor production designer Tom Southwell, choosing the right house—a character in its own right—was critical. The movie was shot almost entirely at Adamsleigh, a 1930s manor in Greensboro, North Carolina. Built for J. H. Adams, a textile magnate who helped pioneer the furnishings industry in nearby High Point, the 33-room, 17,420-square-foot home was designed in the Tudor Revival style by noted local architect Luther Lashmit.Dana's husband, David (Mel Raido), outside the secret room. Photo: Peter Iovino There are few things more comforting than a night on the sofa with an entertaining flick - but what to watch is always a condrdrum. Yes, that means now you can catch some of the premieres virtually from the comfort of your sofa. In order to make the festival more accessible across the country this year, the 159-film-strong programme will be hitting cinema screens not just in the capital, but all across the UK, including Manchester, Glasgow, Belfast and Cardiff.Of late, LFF has made efforts to address the issue of gender disparity within cinema, and this year, 39% of the programme is led by female and non-binary filmmakers (down 1% on last year's offering).From explosive Black westerns, to tearjerking biopics and Paul Mescal dramas, here are the 10 films not to miss... Photograph: ITC Films The Criterion Collection is a curated series of films released on Blu-ray and DVD (formerly on LaserDisc). You can think of it as a list of movies you'd probably watch in film school. Criterion says, "All we ask is that each film in the collection be an exemplary film of its kind." Serious film lovers appreciate that Criterion movie releases are lovingly restored and have extra features, but what if you just want to stream the films, restored or not? We've compiled a list of sixty of the best films from the Criterion Collection available on streaming services
