If you are paying for magazine subscriptions right now, you might miss the opportunity to save. Many magazines are available for free to those who know how to get them. I recently signed up for a handful of online subscription services and I called libraries and local libraries to discover the best ways to get free magazines. In this article, you will find three great techniques to ensure free magazines, including digital subscriptions, monthly releases and old copies. the first 3 ways to get free magazines I looked for free magazines online and I signed for the most free subscriptions as I could find. on all websites that have not asked for payment information, valuemags and rewardsurvey delivered more reliably on their promise of free magazines. some local libraries and libraries were also willing to donate free copies of old magazines, especially to teachers and parents. for digital magazines, I discovered that valuemags offered the simplest immediate access to a selection of popular titles. create an account is completely free and you will not be asked to enter any payment information. but you will be asked for space in your mailbox. when I signed up, I had to accept to receive periodic emails with promotional marketing offers and messages from valuemags. to start, click the "Free Magazines" tab and browse the available selection. at the time of registration, there were seven free digital magazines featured to choose from: BridalEntertainment, field and flow, outdoor life, popular science, Slam and the Red Bulletin. Once I chose a magazine, I clicked on it, entered my name and email address and a password to create an account. There was no limit to how many free digital subscriptions I could sign up for. As soon as I clicked to send, the last problem was immediately available online. A copy of the link was sent to me and saved in my online library. ValueMags regularly adds new numbers and titles, so make sure you check often for the latest selections. Keep in mind that these magazines are only available digitally. For traditional magazine subscriptions, RewardSurvey is a great option. Like other awards sites, RewardSurvey offers points in return for polling. When you sign up for the first time, you will receive 30 credit dollars to put towards the free subscriptions of the magazine. When I created my free account, I was directed to a survey of 18 questions to earn those initial points. This particular investigation concerned mattresses. General questions include my age, sex, approximate family income, the highest level of education and civil status. Most of the questions were about the subject of interest. Once the survey was completed, I had to complete a professional profile that included general information about my work. After that, I was able to select subscriptions of free magazines. The entire registration process took less than 10 minutes. Once completed, I waschoose from a selection of digital and traditional magazines equal to up to $30 value of prizes. Selections include Better Homes & Gardens, O Magazine, Men's Health and more. I have selected some subscriptions of traditional magazines available for free. They started to show up within a month. It was almost a year now, and are still regularly getting Marie Claire, The Oprah Magazine and Women's Day in the mail. Note that you want to select the magazines that are only available for reward points. If there is a price in the magazine in addition to the premium balance, the total will be displayed during checkout. If not, simply enter the shipping information and click to send. You can earn more points through available surveys and redeem them for multiple free magazines or renew the free subscriptions you already have. 3. Local libraries and libraries Local libraries and libraries can be prepared to give you old copies of free magazines before being recycled. If you need bulk magazines for educational or craft purposes, or if you are not worried about having the latest copy, this may be a particularly great option for you. Of course, there are updated magazines available to check or buy at libraries and libraries. But you can be able to get old free copies of bringing home. I called some libraries and local libraries to ask for free magazines. Everyone I talked to seemed anxious to help me getto the right people. Most of them were able to provide information on how to request copies of old books and magazines. It is not a guaranteed way to get free magazines, but it never hurts to call and ask! Final thoughts That you are just trying to spend time with some new reading material, hoping to supply your class with educational resources or magazines of warp for future craft projects, there is no reason to pay for a new subscription. If you are interested in getting digital copies available immediately and then regularly delivered to your email box, create an account with ValueMags. For traditional copies sent to your home, take advantage of the initial points available at RewardSurvey. Finally, for bulky or obsolete copies, call the nearest library or library to ask where their magazines go before being recycled. There are dozens of websites that advertise free magazines, but be vigilant to create an account or registration for a subscription requires credit card information. You do not want to be affected with unexpected renewal fees once your subscription expires. How do you save in magazines and other reading materials?
