Spangler Candy purchased the company a few decades later in 1953, and it still makes them today. Dum DumsDove Dove is one of the most popular brands of chocolate candy in the U.S., thanks to the ice cream truck. In 1939, a man named Leo Stefanos felt it was unsafe for his children to chase the truck down the street, so he made his own ice cream bars and began selling them in the Chicago area. Years later, in 1986, Mars bought the Dove company, and today, it produces several assorted chocolate candies and candy bars in addition to ice cream bars. DotsDots, the movie theater gum drop staple, dates back to 1945. Today, the Tootsie company produces more than 4 billion each year. Original flavors include cherry, orange, strawberry, lemon, and lime. Tropical and sour flavors are also available. Daim BarsDaim bars are made in Sweden, but they've become popular in the U.S. because they're sold in IKEA stores. Each bar is made up of almond-flavored toffee and covered in chocolate, similar to a Heath bar. Dairy Milk Dairy Milk is a type of chocolate candy bar produced by Cadbury. It's available in several flavors, such as English toffee, fruit and nut candy, roast almond, caramello, and milk chocolate. Today, Cadbury is owned by Mondelez International. Divinity Made from egg whites, corn syrup and sugar, divinity candy—both homemade and commercially produced—dates back to the early 20th century. The earliest known recipes are dated 1907 and 1915. Many famous chefs have their own recipes today, but no matter who makes it, the result is a nougat-like candy. Some people opt to add nuts and dried fruit to it. Dip DabsDip Dabs is an old-fashioned British favorite that was produced by Barrat. Today, it's produced by Tangerine Confectionery. The candy is a powdered sherbet with a lollipop inside that you can dip into the powder and lick it off. Dew Drops Dew Drops are old-fashioned fruity candies with a sugary coating. It can be hard to find candy that starts with the letter "E." English toffee is an easy one, which is a rich, buttery candy made of almonds, butter, sugar, and corn syrup, and it is often eaten with chocolate. Other truffles include eggnog truffles and exploding truffles, which are pop rocks candy combined with chocolate ganache in a truffle. Chocolate Easter eggs first appeared in the early 19th century in Europe. Germany and France took the lead to create a new artistic confectionery to celebrate Easter. These chocolate candies come in great varieties, from solid chocolate and creme-filled to hollow eggs with more sweet surprises inside. What Non-Chocolate Candy Starts With the Letter 'E'? For the non-chocolate lovers, the Everlasting Gobbstoppers, a candy from Roald Dahl's 1964 children's novel Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, is always a winner. According to Willy Wonka himself, this sweet treat is, "for children with very little pocket money," with its changing colors and flavors and never seeming to disappear. Elvis fudge is a treat that features the King of Rock and Roll's favorite flavor combination: peanut butter and banana. It consists of a layer of peanut butter fudge with a layer of banana and white chocolate fudge on top. Another non-chocolate treat that starts with "E" is Edinburgh rock or Edinburgh Castle rock. This candy is a traditional Scottish confection, which consists of sugar, water, cream of tartar, colorings and flavorings. Generally, it is found in the form of stick, and its texture is soft and crumbly. What Desserts Start with the Letter "E"? Finding desserts that start with the letter "E" is less of a challenge. There are many sweet treats from the éclair, dating back to the nineteenth century, to a little more modern dessert, the Egg Tart. The French éclair is typically represented with a delicate pastry outside, filled with a yellow pudding, and glazed with chocolate on top. However, this dessert is a fan-favorite with flavors ranging from mint chocolate, banana split and toffee eclairs, to name a few. The Egg Tart has outer pastry crust filled with egg custard, commonly found in Hong Kong, China, Taiwan and other Asian countries. Perfect for the holiday season, eggnog fudge is a winner and easy to make. Combine eggnog, butter, cream and sugar, and bring to a boil in a saucepan. Stir occasionally, reduce the heat until you can form a soft ball and stir in white chocolate chips. 1 From Gilbert Baker to Amber Hikes: The History of the Pride Flag 2 What Led to the Storming of the Bastille? 3 What Are the Best Paint Colors to Use in a Kitchen? 4 What Are the Different Types of Microcomputers? 5 What Services Does FedLoan Servicing Offer to Borrowers? You never know what you're going to get when you book a bed and breakfast. I've had delightful experiences, where I stayed up late with the owners, drinking wine and swapping stories. And I've had bizarre visits, such as the time when I watched a cat walk across a table full of food—and the owner did nothing. So I was a little apprehensive when my husband Don told me that he'd booked a night in a bed and breakfast during a trip we took last year to see his family in Iowa. To make matters weirder, he chose the Heavenly Habitat in Madison County, a church that the owners renovated into a inn. The potential for awkwardness seemed very high. It turned out that our night at the Heavenly Habitat was one of the highlights of our four-day trip. That's because the owner, Steve, did a few things right that all B&B owners should keep in mind: Privacy: No one likes an in-your-face host. We arrived on a rainy Thursday night, carrying a pizza and beer that we had picked up at the local Casey's (an Iowan equivalent to 7-11). We were tired, hungry and in no mood for chatter. Steve welcomed us into our wing of the church, showed us where the silverware and napkins were and then left us alone, without feeling the need to chitchat. Bliss. Appropriate decor: The last time we visited Don's family in Iowa, we stayed at a B&B where the entire room—no lie—was covered in flowers. We're talking flowers on the wallpaper, flowers on the bedspread, flowers on the carpet. It looked like a greenhouse had exploded. The Heavenly Habitat had a few themes going on in its decor: Madison County bridges in the living room; roosters in the kitchen; churchy objects, such as a pew, here and there. But it never felt over the top or obnoxious. Space to spread out: When Steve and his wife bought the church, they took one half—the chapel—as their own to live in. The entire second half, which included the fellowship hall, is available for guests. So we had our own kitchen, living room and bedroom. The inn only has two rooms, and we were the only ones there that night. It felt nice to have some space, without feeling like we were intruding in someone's home. A glorious breakfast: It doesn't have to be fancy. But one of the pleasures of staying at a bed and breakfast is having someone else make your eggs—and when it's done right, you can stay full through mid-afternoon. An upbeat, informative host: We had not planned on going to Winterset's John Wayne birthplace, but Steve talked us into it—and we found it a worthwhile stop. He also made sure that we had maps to find the Madison County bridges. We appreciated Steve's upbeat attitude as well—and a stark contrast to B&B managers we met in Sedona once who told us how much they hated running an inn. Now, the Heavenly Habitat wasn't perfect. There wasn't any Wi-Fi, for example (although the owner said they'd be adding it in the future). But I felt like we got a very good deal, as our room was only $80 (Monday through Thursdays; the price goes up to $100 on the weekends), especially when I saw our next hotel, the rather grim Days Inn in Atlantic, Iowa.
