

I'm not robot

When crafting sentences, we rely on a combination of elements to convey our thoughts. Not every sentence is created equal, as each one consists of different components, including subjects, verbs, and predicate clauses. A basic understanding of sentence structure is essential for writers seeking to make their work engaging. Before delving into simple, compound, and complex sentences worksheets and definitions, let's review the fundamentals of these three types of sentences. A simple sentence typically comprises a subject and a predicate, containing only one independent clause that can stand alone as a complete thought. Examples include: "The cat sat on the mat." In this instance, "The cat" is the subject, while "sat" is the verb. A compound sentence joins two independent clauses using coordinating conjunctions like "and" or "but". On the other hand, a complex sentence contains one independent clause and at least one dependent clause. Let's examine some examples: "Although I was tired, I finished my homework." Here, "I finished my homework" is the independent clause, while "Although I was tired" serves as the dependent clause. John and his dog sat there for over a hundred years waiting to see if they could play something when he finished his homework. We can play games we can have ice cream afterwards. The gym is closed so we can go to the park. I eat almonds because they are my favourite snack before dinner. We went to buy shoes but the car broke down and the bus was also unavailable. Polly is famous because she is very humble and always helps others. James said no because he didn't want to go to the meeting tomorrow. Sam will miss the bus unless she finds her keys quickly. I missed the bus so I walked to the park instead. I bought an apple because it was cheaper than a pear. After we have breakfast, we'll start our work. Now that our work is done, we can relax. You act as if you have never done anything wrong. He cut the apple in half because it was so big and difficult to handle. I picked Chris up today since the bus wasn't running and there was no traffic. Ed sits at his desk whenever he needs to concentrate on his work. You can have this last cookie as I am full and don't want you to eat the whole thing by yourself. He never comes over though I often invite him to my house. We should spend some time together now that we are friends and can rely on each other. We have two options: go to the beach or stay home. He's a good student because he studies hard. I'm feeling hungry, so I'll eat a sandwich. She's tired but keeps working. The rain was pouring down, and we didn't have an umbrella.

What is a complex vs compound sentence. Compound vs complex sentence worksheet pdf. Compounds with some any every and no.