Rose gold border template

It started with my jewelry. I spent hours combing the sites of Jennifer Fisher, Jennifer Meyer and Eddie Borgo looking for pink gold—my last obsession. I stopped at Catbird every weekend. I bought studs and rings and necklaces. It wasn't right after I started looking for makeup in my new favorite metal shadow. Fortunately, it seems to be a trend. My favorite way to wear it is with nail polish (with rings!). I especially love Sally Hansen Complete Salon Manicure in Gold Roses (the shadow has been designed in collaboration with Rodarte) and Essie's nail lacquer in Penny Talk (which is more on the shaved side but still has a pinkish shade to it). Then I discovered that pink gold makes an incredible color of the shadow of the eye. It can act as a neutral, spreads thin on lids with some black mascara, or replace your metallic evening, heavily laminated on lids and over the fold, combined with brown lining and black mascara. (Might I suggest Laura Mercier Caviar Stick Eye Colour in Rose Gold and L'Oréal Paris Infallible Eye Shadow in Amber Rush.) In addition to how beautiful it is, the best part of pink gold makeup is that it is quite seasonless. You can wear it in summer with a faux glow, and in winter when you are paler. It is also very flattering (unless you do not have very fair skin and rosea), and has the same feminine quality of the jewelry. Since it is one of the most beautiful and easiest make-up it seems to wear, so, you can bet it is not going anywhere at any time soon. The warm tone plays well with all the colors of the eyes, and remembers the sunsets, is the perfect shade for the summer, which is why we are resetting in it now. When it comes to pink gold, there is a spectrum of shades to choose from - you can opt for a richer burnt tone, pescous tones, amber or gold with only a hint of rose. It is possible to compose the pigment for the night or only to dress lids withwash for the day. Then there's the question of cream or dust. Decisions, decisions. To help make it easier we rounded up a change of our favorite shadows through the pink gold color spectrum. Keep scrolling for the seven best pink gold shades out there.
