I'm trying to transfer videos from my Pixel 3a to my Windows laptop via USB.I bought a USB-A to USB-A cable (both ends 3.0), and used the USB-A to USB-C adapter to connect my phone to my laptop.However, when I connect the two devices, my laptop does not recognize my phone.And, while my phone does recognize that it's connected, when I go into notifications and tap "more options", all the "use USB for" options are grayed out, and it won't let me switch from "USB controlled by connected device" to "USB controlled by this device." (It says "switching" for about 5 seconds, and then it says "couldn't switch").I've tried all USB ports in my computer. I've tried cleaning the ports and cable. I've tried activating developer options, turning on USB debugging, and switching "Default USB configuration" to "file transfer/Android Auto", all to no avail. (After changing default USB configuration, the "file transfer" option will be checked, but my computer will still fail to recognize my phone.)Now I found a very promising post from someone who was experiencing the exact same issue, except on a Pixel 3: the OP, I want to buy a USB-A to USB-C cable. However, I've read from other users who had similar issues that the "type" of USB-A port can affect data transfer, with some claiming that they had to use USB-A version 2.0, not 3.0. But they didn't have a Pixel 3a.My questions are: has anyone experienced the same issue on a Pixel 3a? Did buying a new cable solve the problem? If so, what type of USB-A did you use? 2.0 or 3.0? "How to transfer photos from Google Pixel to a computer? I want to reset my Pixel 3, but don't want to lose my photos in the process." This is one of the many queries that we get these days about connecting Pixel 3 to a computer. Ideally, it doesn't matter if you have a Pixel 3, Pixel 4a, Pixel 5, Pixel 6 or Pixel 6 Pro, the process to transfer photos from Google Pixel to a computer is the same for all the devices. Since Pixel phones run on a pure Android version, you can easily connect them to your computer or your Google account. In this post, I will let you know how to transfer pictures from Google Pixel to a computer easily. Method 1: Transfer Photos from Google Pixel to Computer via your Google Account Since all Pixel devices are linked to a Google account, you can use the same to transfer your photos. While the process is not that seamless, it will give you the freedom to backup your data and make it available on Google all the time. If you want, you can upload selected photos to Google Drive or can sync the entire gallery of your device. Let's take a look at these two methods to transfer photos from Google Pixel 3 to a computer in detail. Option 1: Use the Google Backup & Sync Feature For this option, you can first sync the entire gallery of your Pixel device to your Google account and can later use its desktop application on your Pixel phone and tap on the "+" icon from its home. From here, you can choose to upload photos to the Drive by selecting them from your device storage. Step 2: Download photos from Google Drive Whenever you wish to save your photos on your computer, just go to the Google Drive website, and log-in to your account. Now, select your photos (or any folder) and from the provided options, choose to download them on your system. Cons • Takes a lot of time • A bit complicated • Limited free storage on Google Drive Method 2: How to Transfer Photos from Google Pixel to a Computer via a USB Cable One of the best things about Android devices is that they can easily be connected to a PC via a USB connection. Therefore, connecting Pixel to a computer will only need a working USB cable. Once your phone is connected, you can transfer photos from Google Pixel 2/3/4 to a computer pretty easily. Step 1: Connect Google Pixel to your computer Using a USB cable, just connect your Google Pixel phone to your PC and wait for it to be detected. While connecting Pixel to a computer, you will get a relevant option on the notification bar. From here, choose to use the device to perform media/file transfer. Step 2: Transfer photos from Google Pixel to a computer Once your device is connected, you can go to Windows Explorer > This PC or My Computer to view it under the external devices section. Now, just browse to its Internal Storage (or SD Card), find your photos, and move them to your system's storage. Mostly, you would find your photos in the DCIM folder. Cons • Connectivity issues • Doesn't work a lot of times • The transfer process can be halted in between Method 3: Transfer Photos from Google Pixel to a Computer with MobileTrans - Backup If you are looking for a free and seamless solution to transfer pictures from Google Pixel 2/3/4 to a computer, then try MobileTrans - Backup. With just a single click, it will let you take the entire backup of your device on your system.
