I do know a lot of people were affected by the hurricane and that is why trip insurance is offered. However, I do know it can be expensive in general even without insurance! I hope you can get in touch with me here by posting a reply as to how I may contact you to further discuss your unfortunate experience. Please do reach out to me!! Love the Beach, any beach! All the beaches in NC are beautiful in their own right, as well as many other beaches worldwide! What makes Holden Beach so special is that there are no big conglomerate businesses and the beaches truly are relaxing, day and night! And Holden Beach is a shell seeker, deer lover and bird watchers' Paradise. All kinds of shells are plentiful, and hopefully you can see how beautiful the water is from the attached pictures. Today, there were about 3 different shades of blue—dark, lighter and a light bluish greenish. Even during a storm when the water is raging, it is quite beautiful! And don't forget the Turtle Nests! I have yet to witness the turtles hatching but look forward to it soon!As far as locals, I am not a local, but I do give everyone the benefit of the doubt. Although there's good & bad in every single person on earth, it is up to each of us to choose our path. Either way, it won't be easy. And, either we are For God -or- against God. As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord, God. So let's all try to respect and help one another, no matter what our ethnicities, or where our origins derive, we are all God's people. He gives us all a chance to follow him as our eternal lives are our own choice. We all are already saved through the blood of Jesus Christ, but we all have to accept him first!God Bless America!This review is the subjective opinion of a Tripadvisor member and not of Tripadvisor LLC.Unethical Property Owner in Holden BeachThe owner of a property here, Lacy Walthall, is extremely unethical.Our family purchased a week at 220 Ocean Blvd W Holden Beach, NC in the summer of 2020. Due to Hurricane Isaias, we were never allowed on the island. The local government had ordered a mandatory evacuation for all of Holden Beach well before the hurricane hit. We reached out to the owner throughout the entire process-before, during, and after Isaias hit the shores-respectfully and repeatedly requesting a refund since it was impossible to stay at the property. The owner refused to refund us our full payment of approximately $8,000, even after a claim was filed with the N.C. Attorney General, which is on record. We also received no help from Vrbo with this, even though we contacted their customer service team with this issue. They advised us to work it out with the owner (even though the owner refused to do his part) and provided no direct support. We also reached out to attorneys who said we would likely win a case if we decided to sue, but it could end up costing more in legal fees. We are a family of public school teachers and nurses who worked hard to save up our money and fund this trip for ourselves and our kids, one we will never take as a family. Instead, we made an involuntary donation to a wealthy, greedy man with investment properties. It was a nightmare.We want all renters interested in this property to be aware of this owner's shady business practices before you book with him.This review is the subjective opinion of a Tripadvisor member and not of Tripadvisor LLC.Easy beach access even though we were just coming through. Stopped on our way to SC and enjoyed a nice walk on the beach. Kids found shells. We parked at the pier and were glad to be able to park for free. This review is the subjective opinion of a Tripadvisor member and not of Tripadvisor LLC.Kayla KWilliamington, NC17 contributionsFound a full conch shell! A very beautiful beach, wasn't crowded because of the weather but was extremely cold. Still had lots of fun looking for shells and sand dollars. Found an almost whole sand dollar and a full conch shell! Written December 29, 2020This review is the subjective opinion of a Tripadvisor member and not of Tripadvisor LLC.Terrible for small kids swimming, horrible biting fliesA major issue with this beach for me is the steep slope and drop off as you walk into the ocean. My mother and child could not swim bc of the violent thrashing wave at the drop off. It made it difficult to get in and out of as you have to take a big step while waves are beating you down to get back to get out. My Mom was too afraid to go in for fear she wouldn't be able to get back out. I have never been to a beach where I have seen so little people swimming. To add to that, there were biting flies that landed on us constantly and it feels terrible! And when I say constantly, I mean it. It never ended, even by the pool, far off the beach. My child was miserable. I have never experienced this before, anywhere. The sand gets so hot here too that it actually melted the skin on my toe racing back to the condo stairs, holding my 3 yr old. The one day I did not wear flip flops, however my child cannot bc of her cerebral palsy, so yes, that does matter to me. I fully agree with the unfriendly locals that seem to hate having tourists around. We went out to eat three times and the food was so bland and cafeteria -like at all of them. I love the beach and have been to so many, all over the country and out of it, but I will never return to this one. It is a shame bc the water was a perfect temperature and not dirty -the plus side.Written September 14, 2020This review is the subjective opinion of a Tripadvisor member and not of Tripadvisor LLC.Love Holden Beach but not the LocalsMy family and I just returned from Holden Beach. The house and beach were wonderful but our last couple of days were ruined by a group of about 15 local yahoos who walked right to our spot in front of our house and plopped themselves down in our space while we were sitting there. I could literally reach my arm out and touch the closest of their chairs. Then they blasted music because, really, what yahoo invasion would be complete without deafening music? My niece asked them to turn their music down. They turned it up louder. I told them they were too close to us. They ignored me. The most perfect moment was when one of them planted a big ol' trump flag in the sand and looked at us with great satisfaction. I guess they could tell we were non trump supporters because we had no flag???The group stayed long after we left in disgust. Their music was so loud a neighbor or someone called the police. The cops went down and spoke to them and as they were walking away the group turned the music up to what had to be the highest volume possible. My nephew, ever the peacemaker, chatted with them when he went to get our umbrella off the beach. They told him - now get this - that they knew the cops who came because they are all cops too!! They told my nephew they knew it was the neighbor to our left who called the police. That neighbor's car was egged over night. Hmmm. Anyone want to venture a guess as to who might've done that? This group was composed of men in their 30s, 40s and 50s, some women and a few children. Their behavior was adolescent, aggressive, bullying and rude. Yahooish to the max. If these guys really were cops - wow Holden Beach, you've got problems!After my long rant I can tell you where we went wrong. Our big mistake was renting a cottage near a public access. DO NOT DO THAT. I don't know if we will go back to Holden but if we do we will avoid the locals for sure.Written September 5, 2020This review is the subjective opinion of a Tripadvisor member and not of Tripadvisor LLC.We'lltravel!We have stayed at Holden Beach for the last five years. We find the East side to be a bit more quiet and convenient to the bridge which takes you to a Grocery Store (Food Lion) and restaurants. Shallotte is a town over and great for bigger restaurants and a large Walmart. The beach is wide enough, so you never feel packed in, regardless of the number of cars parked in the public area. It is a quiet family beach and everyone minds their own business, but will be friendly if you talk to them first. Locals aren't rude, they just give you your space, since you're usually on vaca. I've never experienced sand fleas personally. Some mosquitoes at night. Pack some spray, you'll be fine, it's the south and it's warm, it's normal. There aren't a ton of things to do, but the beach is clean, it's a very safe area and the water is warm. Perfect for me! Written September 3, 2020This review is the subjective opinion of a Tripadvisor member and not of Tripadvisor LLC.Amanda SGreenville, SC6 contributionsHOBBS REALTY - Buyer BewareWe rented a beach house from Hobbs for the week of August 1-3. A hurricane came through which caused the island to be shut down to visitors for part of the week. We did not take out trip insurance because we felt the price was too high.We were never allowed to step foot into the beach house. We were not refunded one cent on the rental, cleaning fees, taxes, etc. We were not offered a discount on a future stay or an alternative week to come. We were offered nothing. While they were polite, they were completely unsympathetic to the fact that they have over $6,000 of our hard-earned money, and we got absolutely nothing in return. They could have avoided this review and possibly even gotten my future business with literally ANY offer to acknowledge the grief my family has experienced over losing our one vacation of the year. I don't understand why we can't share the burden of this loss instead of my family shouldering the entire thing. Do NOT recommend.PS. I learned after the fact that the island shuts down any time winds are above 45 mph, so if you can't afford trip insurance, I would not book for this beach at all.This review is the subjective opinion of a Tripadvisor member and not of Tripadvisor LLC.TravelingMomIf we had a choice of floating through a swamp or going to Holden Beach - I would ask how large the raft was. Locals as mentioned by others are the rudest, most unpleasant group of folks- we were truly shocked by how much they seem to detest vacationers. Some one else mentioned sand fleas and the fleas ARE everywhere- we are worried we may need Lyme Disease testing after reading the affects of sand fleas (my son has over 50 bites, my daughter has close to 100 and my husband and I are covered in bites). We will never return and questioning if something had changed at Holden Beach in the last year as we vacationed here years ago and it was not this horrid. If I was able to give a zero star rating I would. Do yourself, your checkbook and any guests staying with you a favor and look elsewhere.This review is the subjective opinion of a Tripadvisor member and not of Tripadvisor LLC.Mom with a PlanCharlotte, NC1 contributionThe Holden Beach SAND FLEAS!The locals are rude and intolerant of vacationers but we will never return as a result to the sand fleas. The sand fleas surrounding the pool made it impossible to enjoy and the sand fleas on the beach were unlike anything we have ever experienced on any beach within the US, Mexico, or Greece - we are covered in welts from an allergic reaction. The home we rented was nice but unlike the pictures needed some much needed repairs- splinters from the picnic table, oven/stove/ot outdated and not much seating for what you would expect for a 6 bedroom, 6.5 bath. Other negatives include each time it rained the 400 block near Burlington would flood making it almost impossible to run out to the grocery stores unless you enjoy of thrill of possibly flooding your engine (the Food Lion has very limited supplies and the other option: a Walmart in the neighboring town of Shallotte- which was less than desirable). The only putt putt golfing located on the other side of the bridge made us question when we had our last tennis shot and was covered in algae and standing water- where water once flowed, the mosquitoes ultimately required us to leave around the 9th hole. The water slide was an excursion we thought would be nice but the locals pretty much made it clear we needed to return to the island. Overall- the sunset was gorgeous and they have turtle Tuesday which was ecologically appealing to us when making the decision to vacation at Holden Beach. Ultimately, all 18 guests/family members agreed- our stay within the gated community on the west end of the island was a huge disappointment and did not provide the family beach atmosphere we were so looking forward to.This review is the subjective opinion of a Tripadvisor member and not of Tripadvisor LLC.Showing results 1-10 of 322Can you rent umbrellas and chairs anywhere?Taylor DShallotte, NC91 contributionsCheck out Beach Fun Rentals on Holden Beach (island side). It's close to when you come off the bridge.Hi all! I have been going to Oak Island since I was a child , and have brought my own children there. This year we decided to try Holden. We are staying mid 900 block one end of August. Is this a good area? Can anyone compare the 2? Thank you in advance!Amber TMurrysville, PA46 contributionsWe will be visiting Holden Beach in August and staying on Ocean Blvd (a few minutes south of the pier). Are there any coffee shops or parks within walking distance in that area?k85familyGreencastle, IN18 contributionsThere is a coffee shop at the rental place by the bridge, the park is behind the police station also there, and the ocean is one huge park South of you. We're from Holden beach our families are prominent there we left for the hurricane and came to Kingsland Georgia to a friend's house that's also from there. My question is is there a way I can get back into the area? I know I can get from there to Holden. Patricia BI don't live at Holden but haven't you gotten the e-mails from Alan Holden. There is a lot of rain damage, no one can go in, but you will get an e-mail from him when you can go in. The power is back on and soon pumping sewer will start, and the trucks are in trying to move the water out, but no one to go in for a few days for sure.Hi, have you been to Holden when it was not a holiday week? That is always a terrible time to go to Holden!Bob LVonore, TN29 contributionsYes we have, but usually late in the year. Normal late Spring to late Summer times are always somewhat crowded. Schools are out and vacations are in full force everywhere.Laura CGreenville, NC33 contributionsIs the beach more sandy or more 'shell-y'? I've been to Ocean Isle beach, next door to Holden beach and going in the water was hazardous to your feet because the ground was mostly broken shells and very little sand. Is Holden beach similar? Do we need water shoes to go in?m3ark IOcean Isle Beach, North Carolina550 contributionsHolden is pretty similar to Ocean Isle Beach. I never wear sand shoes, but my wife always does. If you think you need them at OIB you should plan on needing them at Holden, too.Laura CGreenville, NC33 contributionsIs the beach more sandy or more 'shell-y'? I've been to Ocean Isle beach and going in the water was hazardous to your feet because the ground was mostly broken shells and very little sand. Is Holden beach similar? Do we need water shoes to go in?MaryL.TRN Bucks County, PA44 contributionsIt's pretty shelly. I wore water shoes on the beach. The plus side is some amazing shells. We found conch shells almost every day and the find of the week was a fossilized sand dollar. No pieces of eight though...although we keep looking.How deep is the pool at the end of the water slide at magic mountain?MaryL.TRN Bucks County, PA44 contributionsAre there showers at the beach?MaryL.TRN Bucks County, PA44 contributionsWe walked almost the whole beach and did not see any public showers.View all who owns bridgecrest financial. what is bridgecrest financial. does bridgecrest reinstate loans
