UCAS example for Education

Education is defined in its broadest sense as any act or experience that has a formative effect on the mind, character or physical ability of an individual, but it is greater than the pursuit of academic excellence and knowledge. As educators, we are trusted to direct and shape young minds; providing a safe harbour for the growth of individuality, opinions, courage and conviction. The desire to be a more knowledgeable educator has been my drive to apply for the BA Education.

My first gateway into working with children was in a Private Day Nursery. I initially started at the nursery as a Nursery Assistant but was promoted to Team Leader of the Baby room (aged 3 to 18 months). My role was to check staff planning and to train and guide new staff into becoming skilled at doing the planning independently. I also had to organise the Birth-to-Three-Matters Framework training for all the staff. Whilst working at the nursery, I was sent on a number of courses related to child protection, allergies, and physical intervention.

In my current role as a Teaching Assistant at Gifford Primary School, I rotate between years 2 to 6 helping children with their work and various projects; for example I assisted a group of children from year 4 in building an electronic car and contributed to the year 6 leavers' assembly by examining the quality and progress of their work. This involves me working as a team member and as an individual, which I can do very well. On many occasions I work with groups of children on numeracy (simple addition and subtraction equations) and literacy tasks (reading and writing and spelling). Whilst working with them I try my best to adapt the tasks to suit their understanding levels. I enjoy being able to interact with the children and finding out about how they see things. I enjoy caring for them and also answering their questions as by doing so I am helping them to develop their confidence and self esteem.

During my voluntary work as a TA in St Vincent's Primary School, I support the teaching of year 6 children, dividing my time between helping out the class as a whole and providing extra support for pupils with learning disabilities, such as Asperger Syndrome. In addition to this I supervised children of all ages in the after school club.

As an independent, self-motivated and tactful individual I feel such personal qualities have enabled me to be an effective practitioner, along with empathy and honesty when working in partnership with parents and carers and in multi-disciplinary team working. I feel I am also enthusiastic and creative which are vital assets when working in Primary Education. I enjoy the responsibility and the challenge of working with children and I have a good deal of patience with children who are slower to learn. I am able to communicate well with both children and adults. In the classroom I have learnt to communicate effectively, emulating the methodology of the staff and observing the responses of the students. Taking note of the invaluable feedback from the staff and students, I have built upon my capabilities and feel prepared for the academic journey ahead.

Throughout the FD in Supporting Teaching and Learning I have experienced several work based interventions which has given me the opportunity to extend my theoretical knowledge with practical application, thus enabling a more holistic understanding of child development and relevant curriculum's. Also over the duration of the course I have had to undertake the analysis of journals which I believe are imperative to best practice, as it enables the practitioner to develop reflective practice to identify strengths and weaknesses and areas needing change both personally and setting wide. I carried out a dissertation in the area of emotional literacy, which is hugely focused upon children's rights and the right to be heard and the impacts this can have if not respected.

My recent part time employment at Tesco has allowed me to deal with various customer enquiries and given me many added responsibilities, helping me to develop my communication skills. I also had to manage my own time keeping which is an important part of the job. I am a very calm person; this I have found helped a lot during the stressful times of year. I believe these skills I have learnt will be of benefit to a primary classroom.

I have many interests including listening to a diverse range of music genres, going to my local gymnasium, walking, reading around history, and playing computer games. The skills gaining from these hobbies can add an additional dimension to activities in school. For example, teaching the children map reading skills and in the IT club.

For me, a degree in Education is the next logical career step; bringing together the tangible experience of employment as a Teaching Assistant and the benefit of a university education to further develop my theoretical knowledge and practical expertise.

Sample admission essay

I like options, I like security, and I like power. With these wants, I knew at a very early age that I would enter business and thus I attended a college that specializes in the subject. In my first position out of school, I was hired by Dunhill Equities as a cold-caller. After several weeks of being hung up on by angry prospects, I decided that this career path would not lead me to success. I then moved within the firm to a position as sales assistant. While this was by no means my dream job, I learned a tremendous amount about business, and I gained useful exposure to the world of finance. Unfortunately, the company hit a period of instability, and after ten months I transferred with my boss to Coleman & Company. Thirteen months later, that company also began to fail, and I began to search for another path to advancement. With two strikes against me, I like a home run and was hired by Sanford Bernstein into a challenging job with limitless opportunity for growth.

After almost three years at Bernstein, I am once again seeking career advancement. My education and work experience have provided me with an excellent introduction to business, and they have sparked my interest in finance. Taking into consideration my foundation and my interests, graduate business school is the next logical step. At this point in my life, I consider a Wharton MBA to be necessary since I need to gain a broader understanding of finance and to sharpen my analytical skills in order to be successful in corporate finance. Wharton's MBA program will allow me to concentrate in finance, strengthen my global business perspective, and provide me with the opportunity to study with and learn from people with varied backgrounds. The school's location in the financial capital of the world and in one of the most diverse cities in the world also suits me perfectly.

Aside from advancing my career, I would also like to develop personally. In college I did not join many clubs or organizations, and I did not participate in sports. Instead, I spent all my time studying, working, or dealing with family issues. Having been away from home and living in New York City for four years, I feel the need to make a name for myself and to develop a meaningful social life. I want to take advantage of the many benefits that extracurricular activities offer, and I want to be involved in the Wharton community.

Upon graduation from the Wharton School, I will seek a position as an associate within the corporate finance department of a large Wall Street investment-banking firm. In three to five years, once I have become adept in financial analysis, drafting prospectuses, preparing business presentations and other financial advisory work, I will move into a senior associate position. Here I will develop my abilities to anticipate client needs and to engineer solutions that address those needs. In approximately 10 years, I will have the experience necessary to take on upper-level management responsibilities.

CHILD NURSING PERSONAL STATEMENT SAMPLE

Sometimes the youngest patients are also the most vulnerable, and I recall my own experiences in the hospital as a child where my lack of knowledge of the things going on around me led to fear and anxiety. The nurses in the hospital were the ones that helped to ease my nervousness, explaining to me the details of the procedure in a way that I could understand, as well as assuring me that I would not feel a thing during the procedure. This experience is what inspired me to pursue studies in nursing, hoping to be able to provide care for future patients. I believe that this Child Nursing Residency program will give me the training that I will need to provide comfort and care to young patients.

Throughout my nursing experience, I have encountered many situations in which children fail to comply with instructions of physicians because they do not understand what is happening. Through my time working with younger patients, I have learned many strategies for helping them feel more at ease with medical procedures, including explaining the procedure in simple terms, or distracting them with conversation about a topic that they are passionate about. My time working with children has given me much experience in managing childhood conditions, and I hope to enhance my knowledge through this residency program.

Completing this Nursing Residency in Child Nursing will provide me with an excellent opportunity to advance my knowledge and career in a direction that will allow me to fulfill my personal goals. Being able to enhance my knowledge of the physiology behind common childhood diseases will give me a stronger basis with which to provide treatment for the symptoms of disease. Additionally, I will be able to advance my understanding of clinical procedures and techniques for saving lives. Through this residency program, I am confident that I will be able to become a nursing professional that is able to provide professional and compassionate care for young patients.

SOP FOR MBA SAMPLE

Being raised in a family of bankers, I understood, from childhood on, that success in life could only be achieved through earning your way up the ladder. As such, I have consistently known success in all my academic efforts because I could devote nothing less than my very best, even as I scraped for money for school through any number of small jobs and projects. In viewing myself as being 'self-made', the words of Israelmore Aivor have always stayed with me. "You must be able to lead yourself before you can lead others."By the time I began the undergraduate study, I found that my earnings from numerous endeavors and by industrious saving habits, I could now pay for my books for several semesters and even contribute to tuition costs.

College was a place of discovery and ceaseless new activities. In being awarded the Silver University Medallion for track and field and excelling at the State level in debate, while serving as Vice President in the Student Senate, I redefined my existing notions of hard work to involve collective efforts with valued teammates, reinforcing that winning only matters if your efforts are ethical and fully committed to realizing a greater good.

While I majored in business, as that has always been my interest and strength, in minor in mechanical engineering, I had the opportunity to essentially deconstruct and reconstruct an automobile which led to the offer of a position As an engineering assistant focusing on motor redesign for almost a year, I gained in-depth insight into both intricate mechanical functions as well as a comprehensive view of how large-scale technology corporations seamlessly function.

Against this backdrop, I now seek to unify my skill sets as well as deepen my managerial abilities and business acumen. In envisioning a career as a corporate leader in the automotive industry, the skills of an MBA are precisely what is needed in order to assume a leadership role in this industry. Moreover, I have always been an entrepreneur and, in the future, plan to own a small business field of automotive servicing.

Since the age of five, the world of business, from transactions to the entrepreneurship of selling cold drinks on a warm day, has been a part of who I am, now with this acquired interest in the automotive industry, I am certain that my future course is set. What remains is acceptance to an exemplary MBA program, and so I enthusiastically submit my credentials.

However, try to avoid the most obvious opening phrases in your personal statement, so it stands out from the front line. To help, every year UCAS publishes a list of the most common opening lines in personal statements, and urges applicants to avoid using these hackneyed phrases. Previous years' top five included: 'A young age...' 'For as long as I can remember...' 'I'm applying for this course because...' 'I've always been interested in...' 'Through my life I've always enjoyed...' And the 11th issue was a Nelson Mandela appointment, which takes us to our next section... And you don't trust someone else's words - undo opening quotes Classifications are the top of the list of admissions that hate the pets of the tutors. They are particularly upset if you put a fair date at first - and it is even worse if you don't really explain why you are there. It's your statement, after all. They don't want to know what Nelson Mandela thought - they want to know what you think! Connect the beginning of your statement at the end A final thought. A technique that can be effective is the "neckening". This is when you link your opening prayer to the closing paragraph, reinforcing and adding an additional dimension at the end of what you said at the beginning. For example, if you started with an interesting line about what you are currently motivating to study your chosen grade course, you could connect to it in your closing paragraph, perhaps with something about why you would love to study this more to uni. What else are you fighting in your personal statement? See our guides to conclude your statement and discuss your pastimes in the right way. If you are in the early stages of writing your personal statement, take a look at our beginner guide that covers everything you need to know to write your personal statement, or use Personal declaration tool to create an easy eraser to work. The personal declaration is written written of an individual's accomplishments and is the first part to be included in your resume. Usually, it is a basic sheet of personal activities that is given to prospective managers to help them separate themselves from the competition. This statement is also included as part of a college or college application. This format is the only place where you can develop your ambitions, experience and skills. It is an extended note about you and the main part of your universities and college admission services. Details of Personal Statement Template A personal statement template is a document where you can distinguish yourself from other applicants. Therefore, these statements can have many uses, either for universities or for your CV, but their basic purpose is always to sell themselves to the reader. Certainly, a well-written personal statement can mean the difference between standing out from the crowd and its application is rejected. Writing the personal statement isn't daunting, as it seems, although the basic purpose of the statement is to convey who you are, what you can offer, why you are the best person for this job and what your career goals are. How to write your personal declaration template? There are several ways you can write your own personal statement, however, the following points may help you get command over it. 1- A personal statement is your interaction with your viewers, therefore, you will have to be honest with yourself. There's no need to introduce yourself as a hero. 2- Don; TO use words to distract others because they are wiser than you. Be straight to your subject and be clear about what you are going to present. 3- Try to present yourself in a very positive way. The way you can achieve your goals must be based on positivity. 4- Your motivation to achieve your professional goals should reflect your drive, not your greed. My career goal is to assume a role that allows me to assume the responsibility of the analysis and interpretation of commercial data for a well-respected leading company and the leader in the market. Postgrado CV Template Treatment with redundancy is never easy. But when it comes to the right way, it does not need to be an obstacle when making applications. Put the main focus on your job history, and provide more information for your break in your cover letter. It is not even necessary to mention it again, if you have already explained it elsewhere. Remember, your personal declaration is intended to be sold. So emphasizes your positives instead of apologizing for a negative. Driven Retail Manager with more than ten years of experience in the industry of the Success log, including the management of the highest performance store in the region, and have the lowestRotation rate of all UK outlets. Currently unemployed due to the closure of the company, looking for the right opportunity to bring my experience to a well-established fashion brand in a top management position. How to do: Dealing with RedundanceRedundated CV Templatethere There are many good reasons why someone needs to take a career. Break.Some possible examples might include parental leave, caring for a family member, planning to travel or in a long-term illness. However, whatever the reason for your own rest, it is never something you should feel the need to justify to a prospective employer. Actually, knowing how to explain a breach in your CV is primarily about trust. "So leave any extra Explanation for your cover letter and focus your personal statement about your career before the breakup "and any skill learned during your spare time, which may be applicable to the function. A highly motivated and experienced PA, I am currently looking to resume my professional career after dedicating the last five years to raising a family.
